MESSAGE SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN SENT BY MAJOR ARCHIE BUTT FROM LIFE RAFT IN MID-OCEAN FOUND AT BLOCK ISLAND

BLOCK ISLAND, July 31.—A bottle with a badly corroded metal top was found on the beach here, containing this note on an official wireless blank:

"APRIL 16, 1912. MIDOCEAN.
"HELP! ON A RAFT. TITANIC SINKING. NO WATER OR FOOD.—MAJOR A. BUTT."

On the other side of the blank was another signature opposite a space marked on the official blank:

"MAJOR A. BUTT. T. O., OFFICER IN CHARGE OF THE WATCH."

The authenticity of the note has not been established. The bottle was found by A. J. Loram, manager of the Cathedral Orchestra of New York city, and W. H. Jones of No. 1044 Madison avenue, Paterson, N. J. It has always been supposed that Major Butt sank with the Titanic. Whether he penned the note on board the steamship as it was sinking, or later wrote it out on board a raft, probably will never be known.

SIX INDICTED IN "L" CASE

WILLIAM C. RUSSELL QUIZZED ON STAND

William C. Russell, elder son and co-executor under the will of the late Senator Daniel Russell of Melrose, part of whose fortune is being claimed by the rival Dunn, was put on the witness stand at 11:45 today by Attorney William R. Scharton, counsel for Dakota Dan.

One of William C. Russell's most striking utterances on the stand today was:

I did not recognize Fresno Dan the first time I saw him, but thought that he must either be my brother or a personally interested double.

Assail Scharton's Method.

Attorney William R. Scharton's method of conducting the Russell will contest in behalf of Dakota Dan was bitterly assailed in the East Cambridge Court today by Attorney Robert W. Nason of counsel for the will.

Attorney Nason asked Master Pevey to exclude at this time the testimony of co-Executor Russell.

Mr. Russell had only been on the witness stand 15 minutes.

"I move, Your Honor, that this evidence be excluded and that Mr. Scharton be prevented from proceeding along his present line of inquiry. I do this, because I claim it that it has no time for this witness to testify, and that Mr. Scharton's inquiry is immaterial and irrelevant.

"It is merely an attempt on the part of the other side," added Mr. Nason, "to educate Dakota Dan so that he may know all that his brother has to say about the early incidents in the life of Daniel Blake Russell. As he sits here in court, he may smilingly absorb every point so that when he takes the witness stand he will be prepared to make a better impression than Fresno Dan."

"I contend that Mr. Scharton is trying this case back end to, and really attempting to try our case. If his client is the real Daniel Blake Russell, if he is genuine, they would put him on the stand the very first thing and allow him to be open to every line of inquiry from every possible source. This is merely part of their tactics and I wish to protest it."

Scharton's Reply Spirited.

"The issue before this court is not whether Fresno Dan is the right heir, but whether Dakota Dan, the petitioner, is the legal son. That is the only question that this court is called upon to decide. I contend that Dakota Dan has no standing in this court so far as any evidence that has been introduced to date is concerned."

Attorney Scharton replied with spirit, saying:

"Your honor, Mr. Nason may charge me with trying my case back end to, but it is merely because I have stolen a march on them. I started in this way because

SOUTH END GROUNDS, July 31.—Yesterday's fourteen-inning battle with the St. Louis Cardinals did not seem to have any tiresome effect on the Pilgrims today for they were ready and full of fight for their double battle with the Pirates this afternoon.

Marty O'Toole, the South Framingham $22,500 beauty, was scheduled to face the Pilgrims in one of the battles, and needless to say the fans from his home town were out in numbers to root for him.

FIRST GAME.

Wagner singled to right, scoring Mensor, and took second on the throw to the infield. Miller was safe on McDonald's low throw, Wagner taking third. A double steal was attempted, but Wagner was run out between third and the plate, Rariden to O'Rourke to Devlin to McDonald to Rariden. ONE RUN.

Rosenthal Assassins' Betrayer Shot "Only Confession Can Save Becker"

"Big Jack" Zelig, gang leader said to have furnished the men to kill Rosenthal.

Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker, charged with murder in the first degree as the man who ordered the killing of Rosenthal.

"Bald Jack" Rose, collector of graft from gamblers, upon whose confession Becker was arrested.

MORE ARRESTS OF HIGH POLICE OFFICIALS EXPECTED AS ROSENTHAL MURDER SEQUEL.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Samuel Schepps, named several times as a suspect in the Rosenthal murder, and who rode with Jack Rose in an automobile the night the gambler was assassinated, notified District Attorney Whitman through his attorney today that he would surrender tomorrow.

Following the gambler was shot down by hired assassins on Broadway. James Vernella betrayed "Dago Frank" Cirofici. Vernella was murdered in his cafe at No. 163 West Thirty-fourth street.

Jack Rose, Webber and Vallon—the three men who were responsible for Beck's indictment for murder in the first degree—trembled in their cells in the West Side Court, lest they be blackjacked to death.

Vernella was proprietor of the Dante Cafe. He was murdered on the third floor of his resort early yesterday morning.

Following the amazing revelation by "Bald Jack" Rose that men high in the police department have been blackmailing gamblers and other crooks to the extent of $2,400,000 a year, District Attorney Whitman declared today that only a full confession could save Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker from death in the electric chair for the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

Mr. Whitman made the positive assertion that in his opinion the confessions of Rose, Webber and Vallon which placed the responsibility of the assassination of Rosenthal directly on Lieutenant Becker were sufficient to send the former head of the strong arm squad "to the electric chair."

"In the face of the evidence that has been heard before the Grand Jury," said District Attorney Whitman, "I see no way by which

MAY FINE RICH MAN; MISSED JURY SERVICE

NEWPORT, July 31.—Robert Sedgwick of New York, one of the leading men in the rich cottage colony, received a note from the jury commissioners of New York today that he is liable to arrest and a $50 fine for disregarding a previous notice to serve on a jury. Sedgwick said: "It's a mistake. I never received any jury notice."

MORE TROOPS RUSHED TO THE COAL FIELDS

MT. GRETNA, Pa., July 31.—Two more companies of West Virginia State troops today were ordered rushed from the military maneuvers here to the Paint Creek district of West Virginia to reinforce the militia already doing duty there in the coal strike.

GRAND JURY FINDS SECRET BILL AFTER INQUIRY INTO STRIKE

Six division superintendents of the Boston Elevated Railway Company were arrested and brought to the Suffolk County Courthouse today on secret indictment warrants, charging them with perjury, growing out of their testimony before the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration in the recent hearings on the Elevated strike.

ARRAIGNED BEFORE JUDGE PIERCE.

The names of the six indicted men are:

HERBERT A. PASHO,
JOSEPH L. WEBBER,
THOMAS E. WILLIAMS,
KARL S. BARNES,
JOHN A. SMITH,
JOHN B. HARRINGTON.

The secret indictments, upon which the arrests and arraignments were made, were reported at 10:15 today by the Suffolk Grand Jury, which has been sitting in special session for a fortnight, investigating charges of alleged perjury and coercion by Elevated officials.

Warrants for the arrests were made out and were given to Police Lieutenant John J. Rooney, who is attached to the District Attorney's office. Lieutenant Rooney took the warrants immediately to police headquarters across Pemberton square, where they were given to headquarters inspectors to serve.

Warrants Served "in Hand."

The warrants were served "in hand," as they say. That is, they were served individually on the person indicted, who was then brought to the courthouse.

All six division superintendents were at the court house by 2 o'clock.

The six division superintendents were taken to the office of Clerk John P. Manning of the Criminal Court. Their bail was fixed at $1,000 each by District Attorney Pelletier. The bail was furnished and the six superintendents returned to

RE-ELECT CRANE TO COMMITTEE

United States Senator Winthrop Murray Crane was elected national committeeman from Massachusetts for the next four years at the meeting of the Republican State Committee today. The election followed upon the committee because of the deadlock in the Massachusetts delegation at the Chicago convention in June.

At the time of the National Convention, the Bay State delegates stood eighteen for Crane and eighteen for anybody but Crane.

Practically the whole membership of the committee was present. There were no Roosevelt men on the floor, so the selection of Senator Crane was unanimous.

Charles E. Hatfield, chairman, was appointed the Massachusetts member of the committee to notify President Taft tomorrow of his nomination. Chairman Hatfield left for Washington after the meeting.

The committee issued a call for the Republican State Convention in Tremont Temple at 10:30 o'clock, October 5, to nominate presidential electors.

BECKER MAY ESCAPE DEATH CHAIR

Police Blackmailers in New York Get $2,400,000 a Year, Says Rose.

Lieutenant Becker can avoid the death penalty for this crime, unless he consents to make a confession that will enable me to reach every man responsible for the system of vice and corruption which undermines the city administration.

Becker's Part in Crime.

"I do not say that Becker would get immunity. The evidence indicates that he is guilty of having planned and ordered one of the most atrocious crimes in the history of the city. The motive and the deliberate manner in which the assassination of Rosenthal was carried out was a direct blow at the only system we have for the protection of life and property.

"Becker's part in the crime is made more serious by reason of the fact that he was a police officer. As long as I am a prosecutor of the county of New York he shall not escape punishment for this murder, but I do say that assistance from him will be considered an ameliorating circumstance in his favor.

"Rose, Webber and Vallon have each given corroborative testimony that they were ordered by Becker to get Rosenthal out of the way. Becker told them, according to the sworn evidence, that if they failed to carry out his orders he would 'FRAME THEM UP' and send them to prison. He went further, and said that HE WOULD GIVEN DO THE JOB HIM SELF, if it became necessary.

"Men have been sent to the electric chair on evidence no stronger than this. But here we have in Rose a man who had been Becker's collector for several years in a lawless undertaking. The instructions concerning the killing of Rosenthal were delivered in the presence of both Webber and Vallon.

"We have Rose telephoning the details of the murder to Becker a few minutes after the crime had been committed.

Means Disgrace for Becker.

"There is the further proof that during the several days intervening between the murder and the date on which Rose was taken into custody Becker repeatedly communicated by telephone with his "handy man."

"Most important of all is the motive. Herman Rosenthal was the one man who threatened and dared to expose Becker. If Rosenthal had been permitted to live it would have meant disgrace for the police officer. Rosenthal was likewise on bad terms with Jack Rose, Becker's friend and collector. Exposure by Rosenthal would have also meant a serious loss to this man.

Becker Won't Confess.

Lieutenant Becker will refuse to confess, according to John W. Hart, his counsel. The attorney said:

"Becker has nothing to squeal about; he has nothing to confess. The mere say-so of Jack Rose won't go anywhere. There may be two or three to corroborate him but a half dozen Jack Roses don't amount to much."

That District Attorney Whitman is not confident of convicting Becker with the evidence in hand was indicated when he said:

"We will need other evidence to substantiate the testimony of these three men and we believe we will be able to get it. We know that graft exists in the police department, but it has been very hard to put our finger on it. If it is true that Becker instigated this murder it is as horrible a crime as could be committed, and he should be punished for it. Think of a man in charge of 10,000 other men whose sole duty it was to protect the public, betraying his trust in such a manner. I don't say that Becker is guilty, however; that remains to be proven."

Mr. Whitman said that Rose, in the second statement made yesterday, had gone over many details connected with the crime which were not mentioned in the first confession.

"Billiard Ball Jack," as he is common ly known in the gambling fraternity, told the District Attorney that the men responsible for the actual killing made their escape in the stolen colored automobile driven by William Shapiro, which he Rose, had provided for their use. He

"ONLY CONFESSION CAN SAVE BECKER FROM DEATH CHAIR," SAYS WHITMAN.

Here is the latest emphatic statement by District Attorney Whitman of New York, in which he declares that Police Lieutenant Becker is likely to go to the electric chair for the assassination of Gambler Rosenthal:

In the face of the evidence that has been heard before the Grand Jury, I see no way by which Lieutenant Becker can avoid the death penalty for this crime, unless he consents to make a full confession that will enable me to reach every man responsible for the system of vice and corruption which undermines the city administration.

I do not say that Becker would get immunity. The evidence indicates that he is guilty of having planned and ordered one of the most atrocious crimes in the history of the city.

As long as I am prosecutor of the County of New York, he shall not escape punishment for this murder, but I do say that assistance from him will be considered an ameliorating circumstance in his favor.

Conspired for Six Weeks.

"These men all belonged to the Big Jack Zelig gang," said Rose. "I talked the matter over with Zelig about six weeks before we finally pulled the job off. I told him Becker wanted us to get Rosenthal out of the way and that it was up to him to furnish the men.

"I never knew how Zelig went about making his selection, but the word was evidently passed around, and the four men, Whitey Lewis, 'Lefty' Louie, 'Dago' Frank and 'Gyp the Blood,' met in an appearance when we wanted them. Zelig was just as much afraid to disobey Becker's orders as we were, and I have given to understand that if he helped out in this case he would be free from the charge of carrying concealed weapons."

Mr. Whitman said that Rose had not been able to tell the exact amount paid the assassins for their work. This part of the arrangements was left to "Bridgy" Webber. From some unnamed source the District Attorney has been informed that the murderers received $2,000.

J. M. Sullivan, representing Jack Rose, was asked yesterday:

"Just when did Rose first confess?"

"Well about a week ago, to be exact, last Wednesday he told me enough to let me know where he stood. I had gone to him to give him the advice I have just related to you. Rose weakened. He felt, in fact he knew, that he was being deserted. The Tombs did it. The place is well named. It is a hole of depression. It got Rose. It will get Becker, too.

"Becker will break down. Forty-eight hours in the Tombs is usually enough. Becker realizes now that it is squarely up to him. He is deserted now and he must know it. As a gambler I earnestly hope that he will make a clean breast of it.

"Several men are hanging upon the very wind that blows from the Tombs now, hearkening for the first whisper from the lips of Becker. I tell you that the pillars of the temple are about to fall. Watch those pillars totter."

Rose, himself a gambler, who admits that he "fathered" the gang who shot Rosenthal outside the Hotel Metropole, has "squealed" on the whole system of police corruption in the metropolis of America, and District Attorney Whitman is confident that his story and those of Webber and Vallon will be "good" in every and possibly four of the biggest men in the gambling ring.

These gamblers have been promised immunity. Becker, in the Tombs for the second day since his arrest on a charge of murder in the first degree, has not been promised immunity; but the prosecutor does say that his confession might lessen Becker's punishment if found guilty.

Becker realizes his terrible situation, but he hasn't lost his nerve. He says emphatically that he won't "squeal;" and declares that he is entirely innocent.

More Arrests Expected.

It is rumored that Mr. Whitman has ordered eight more arrests in connection with the investigation, which may keep the Grand Jury busy all Summer; but he refuses to talk about this. One thing is certain, and that is that the New York police is going to have the greatest overhauling in its history. The "Rose" Tweed revelations have been outdone.

In spite of the furor in official circles, Mayor Gaynor has declared that he has perfect confidence in Commissioner Waldo. Asked to comment on the situation the Mayor said:

"I can only repeat as heretofore, that I hope everything will proceed in order and that all of those concerned in the murder will be convicted.

"No, sir, I do not condemn Mr. Waldo. He has done faithful and good work in office, and will continue to do so. That one misdeed by him has deceived him is nothing to condemn him for. That has often happened to others and will continue to happen."

Prisoners Feared Attack.

District Attorney Whitman fulfilled his promise to Rose, Webber and Vallon, the three gamblers whose confession led to the arrest of Becker, charged with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, and had them transferred to another prison than the Tombs.

They were taken from the Criminal Courts building in a locked and heavily guarded prison van to the New Side Court Prison. The gamblers told Mr. Whitman they were sure that the Tombs was filled with "stool pigeons" and that they would be blackjacked if sent back there.

More details of how Rose and Webber confessed also came to light today. Webber's confession is largely credited to his wife. If he said she did some detective work on her own account after his arrest and became convinced that he was to some extent involved in the case. She then begged him at every interview to confess and save himself.

TAFT TIPS UNCLE JOE AS TO DRESS FOR NOTIFICATION

WASHINGTON, July 31.—"I just called to find out whether I had to wear a Prince Albert to the notification ceremonies tomorrow, or if I could come in a plain shirt," said Uncle Joe Cannon today, when questioned by reporters at the White House concerning the purpose of his visit to the President.

"The President told me I was harmless and could attend in any costume I felt like," continued the former Speaker. He declined to say which he will wear, preferring to wait until he saw how high the mercury climbed tomorrow.

The President went to the railroad station today to meet Mrs. Taft and Charlie Taft, who arrived from Beverly to be present at the notification ceremonies. Though more than 1,000 invitations have been issued for the ceremonies, which will take place at 11 o'clock, simplicity will be the keynote of the occasion. The White House will resemble a big picnic grounds. Senator Root will make the official speech of notification, and the President will respond with its acceptance.

Dr. Maurice Howe Richardson, one of the most noted surgeons in the country, one of the best known cancer specialists in the world and surgeon-in-chief at the Massachusetts General Hospital, was found dead in bed today at his home, No. 224 Beacon street today. It was thought that death was due to cerebral hemorrhage. The famous surgeon was in his sixty-first year.

Dr. Richardson was apparently in the best of health when he retired last night. He attended to his usual duties at the Massachusetts General Hospital yesterday. Roosevelt. The daughter was given away in marriage by her father. The couple went to Europe on their honeymoon. A telegram was sent them today announcing the death of the bride's father.

Dr. Richardson was a member of the American Surgical Association, of the International Surgical Association and of the Unitarian church. He belonged to the Somerset, University and St. Botolph clubs. He was the author of a number of volumes which are regarded as authoritative by surgeons the world over and contributed to Park's Surgery by American authors, and to Dennis' System of Surgery.

Dr. Richardson was well known on the Cape, where he often spent many seasons at his Summer home, North Eastham. MAGDALENA BAY PERIL RECOGNIZED BY COMMITTEE'S REPORT TO SENATE

WASHINGTON, July 31.—The Senate committee on foreign relations today reported the following resolution as the sense of the committee regarding the attitude the United States should assume in regard to the proposed concession by Mexico to Japanese fishing companies of land alongside Magdalena Bay:

Resolved, that when any harbor or other place in the American continent is so situated that the occupation thereof for naval or military purposes might threaten the communications or the safety of the United States, the government of the United States could not see with grave concern the possession of such harbors or other place by any corporation or association which has such a relation to another government not American as to give that government practically power or control for naval purposes.

AMERICANS FLEE MEXICAN OUTRAGES

El. PASO, July 31.—All Americans are fleeing from northern Mexico to El Paso. The rebels having been driven back into Sonora, the rebels now have all of western Chihuahua at their mercy.

LAST OLD NORTH ENDER IS BURIED

The last of the old-timers of the North End has just been buried.

For eighty-five years, Miss Elizabeth C. Dodd lived at No. 190 Salem street. She did not care for the changes that came to her neighborhood. Many of her old friends moved away years ago. Her own relatives went to Brookline, but Miss Dodd said that as long as she lived, she could never be happy any where else than in Salem street, in the Jewish and Italian section.

So she kept the old place on Salem street, and liked to think how Salem street looked in her girlhood days, when she knew many of the children who used to go to Sunday school at Christ Church, a few doors below her home.

A few of the foreign children who replaced them she would often welcome to her home. These boys and girls made themselves very interesting to her. She would tell the Italian and Hebrew children what she did when she was a girl in the North End.

Every one liked the kind lady. "Tim" Murphy, who has been in the North End the greater part of his life, whose business is on Hanover street, said today:

"Everyone had gone from the North End who used to know this place in their early life except Miss Dodd. She remained here and people got to know her on the streets. I guess she felt the changes that have come around here.

"I think she was about the last of the old stock. Miss Dodd used to own lots of property around where she lived, but I think that most of it is now sold. She was a good woman to her neighbors, but for the past few years had not gone out much. In her house are many interesting Revolutionary relics."

SEEK CROWD THAT ATTACKED STRIKE-BREAKING SEAMEN

The police are today looking for members of the gang of men who set upon and beat six sailors and firemen from the collier Canadwise, which tied up to the New England Coal Company's dock at the foot of the Northern avenue bridge with a company of strike-breakers.

There were about thirty-five men in the crowd. When the seamen came ashore they found the men waiting for them. Bricks and debris taken from the ruins of a nearby grain elevator were hurled at the sailors, who fled up Northern avenue. A call was sent to Station 6 in South Boston and as a squad of policemen arrived the crowd fled.

Girl Society's Best Autoist Tests Are Waived for Belle

ESTHER MORELAND, SOCIETY'S BEST AUTOIST

Esther Moreland's Skill at Driving Wheel Praised by Rhode Island Official.

NEWPORT, July 31.—Miss Esther Moreland of Pittsburgh, one of the prettiest girls Newport has yet welcomed, has been declared by Colonel Franz P. King, official of the Rhode Island State roads board, to be the best automobilist of her sex here. Yesterday Miss Moreland motored to the courthouse to undergo examination for a Rhode Island automobile license.

Miss Moreland was subjected to rigid questioning on automobiles. When this was concluded she said, "I'm ready for the practical examination," meaning she was ready to take the officer for a ride to explain every part of her car. But as Miss Moreland had answered many questions quickly and correctly Colonel King said:

"You need not take the practical examination for I'm satisfied you know all about automobiles."

When filling in the license blank Colonel King asked, "Are you over sixteen?" Miss Moreland blushed and replied, "Just a little."

The license was granted. Later Colonel King said: "Miss Moreland passed the best examination among the women from the society colony I have ever questioned."

WINTHROP TAX RATE REMAINS AT $19.20

Winthrop taxpayers have had a little surprise handed them by the town assessors. It had been expected the tax rate would be $20 at least. The assessors announced the rate will be $19.20, the same as the rate last year. The increase reported in the town's assessable property was large.

CALL ATTORNEY FOR MRS. GRACE

ATLANTA, Ga., July 31.—Solicitor General Dorsey today continued his efforts to prove that Mrs. Daisy Opie Grace, who is on trial for the shooting of her husband, practically confessed guilt when she met the wounded man in the hospital, by asking him why she had been accused of the crime, before she knew any charge would be made against her.

The State claims also that the shooting had been planned long before, in order to secure $25,000 life insurance.

Fight Over Mystery Letters.

A fight over the prosecution's attempt to introduce evidence concerning mysterious letters said to have been written by Mrs. Grace in an alibi plot marked the trial today.

Balked in its first attempt, the State finally put Mrs. Grace's own lawyer, Luther Z. Rosser on the stand and attempted to question him about a typewriter on which Mrs. Grace is said to have written one of the letters. Rosser refused to answer any question on the ground of his confidential relations with his client and was upheld by the court.

The prosecution admits that its case is purely circumstantial. It is possible that Mrs. Grace's fate may be in the hands of the jurors by tonight or tomorrow.

With the expectation that Mrs. Daisy Opie Grace might take the stand in her own defence, the little courtroom in which the trial is being held was early besieged by hundreds today.

Grace, who, stretched on a hospital cot, had faced his wife in court, was absent today, his attendance being forbidden by the physicians. He showed alarming effects of the ordeal and a total collapse was feared.

PRAISE RICHARDS IN SETTLEMENT OF THE L STRIKE

E. A. Filene and Louis D. Brandeis have issued the following statement regarding the settlement of the controversy:

If the members of the Central Labor Union who passed the very appropriate resolution of thanks to those who had aided in securing the settlement of the Boston Elevated Railway strike, had known all the facts, James L. Richards would have been named by them as one of the most prominent factors in securing a settlement on which the community has every reason to congratulate itself. It was through his recognition of the rights of labor, his sincerity and his courage that it became possible to induce the Board of Directors of the Boston Elevated Railway Company to approve the settlement which was negotiated.

In connection with the settlement of the strike Mr. Richards showed the same fairness of spirit and keen realization of public rights which characterized his settlement of the Boston Gas controversy and secured for the public, as well as for those interested in the company, an almost ideal condition in a great public service corporation.

ONE KILLED, SIX SHOT IN LONDON DOCK RIOT

LONDON, July 31.—One man was killed and six others shot in a battle between dock workers and strike-breakers today. The dock workers went to the docks 2,000 strong seeking their old jobs. When they found their places filled by non-union workers, and were curtly told that there were no places for them, they immediately attacked the men at work. Many of the former strikers were armed with revolvers, which they used freely, while the others hurled bricks and other missiles. The police reserves ended the riot.

STILL DECLARE TWO OF STEAMER CREW LOST

Two men of the crew of the steamer City of Rockland are still to be accounted for, following the collision of the Rockland with the steam collier William Chisholm, according to repeated declaration of sailors from the Rockland today.

Vice-President F. A. Jones and President Calvin Austin of the Eastern Steamship Corporation said this afternoon all the crew of the crippled steamer, as well as all the passengers, had been accounted for.

James McHenry, one of the Rockland's crew, says:

"Not all the City of Rockland's crew was accounted for. I don't care what anyone else says. James Ross and Michael Glynn have not been reported. They are not on the Rockland. Nor have they been seen on the Chisholm, nor on the Belfast, to which the Rockland's injured were transferred. They have not been seen or heard of since a short time after the collision."

Will Hurry Wireless In.

The Eastern Steamship Corporation is to hurry wireless equipment into the City of Rockland, the City of Bangor, the Bay State and the Ransom B. Fuller. These are Boston boats which so far lack that life-saving device. President Austin says that they will be equipped with wireless by October 1.

The damage to the City of Rockland, according to President Austin is $10,000.

Regarding wireless and the company's plans, President Austin says:

"While there is no government rule requiring wireless there is a bill now before Congress to compel the installation of such outfits on passenger vessels making a run of 200 miles between ports.

"We have been waiting to see what the government would do, as there is some hitch over the question of supplying power for the wireless from storage batteries. However, you may say that the four vessels now without wireless will be so equipped by October 1, which is about the best we could do under the circumstances. The J. T. Morse, which runs from Rockland to Bar Harbor and intermediate ports, the Mooshegan of the Portland-Rockland line, and other small boats that are owned by this corporation run mostly on inland waters and do not need wireless.

Freight, Baggage Saved.

President Austin said the steamer's freight and baggage were all saved. The corporation is insured against loss. But President Austin could not say as to claims made by passengers who lost valuables in the haste following the collision.

The corporation has the utmost confidence in Captain Blair of the Rockland, according to President Austin. The officials believe Captain Blair's statement that the Rockland was running at slow speed and that all members of the crew were on the alert.

TWO KILLED AS CARS AND ENGINE PLUNGE INTO COLORADO RIVER

PUEBLO, Colo., July 31.—The Chicago express of the Rock Island road was wrecked near here today. Engineer G. S. Wearingen and Fireman J. M. Duncan were killed. A number of passengers were injured.

The tracks were weakened by a washout and the engine and cars, except the Pullmans, plunged into the Fountain River.

TWO MEN INJURED IN TROLLEY CRASH

Two men were seriously injured in a collision of a street car and a brewery wagon on Tremont street, near Church street, today. A number of the passengers on the car were badly shaken up.

The injured are William Butler of Worcester street, Roxbury, the driver, and his helper, Thomas Kilday, of Heath street, Roxbury. Both are at the City Hospital.

WANTS TO PREVENT STRIKE ON HER HOUSE

Mrs. Etta Dana of Roxbury sought an injunction today to prevent a strike which she says is threatened on a house that is being built for her at No. 250 Seaver street. Mrs. Dana declared that George Goldstein, in charge of the work, threatened to call a strike unless Mr. Dana paid $100. Goldstein alleges is due for previous work. There will be a hearing tomorrow.

ONE MORE FOR MAHER.

GOODWOOD, England, July 31.—American jockeys shone here today when August Belmont's Tracery with Danny Maher up won the Sussex stakes; Burgess's Sweeper, O'Neill up, was second, and Hamilton's Applejack third. Five horses ran. The betting on the first three was respectively 1 to 2, 5 to 2 and 100 to 8.

SIX INDICTED IN "L" CASE

their official duties. They will be arraigned at a later date.

Henry F. Hurlburt, one of the Elevated's attorneys, was at the courthouse. He was ready to be of assistance to any Elevated officials if necessary.

News Causes Tremendous Stir.

After reporting its secret indictments the Grand Jury adjourned the Elevated investigation to August 15. Monday it will take up the business of the August term.

The news that the Grand Jury has reported secret indictments caused a tremendous stir through the courthouse.

The Grand Jurymen assembled as usual today. They filed into the second session of the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court, where Judge Pierce was awaiting them.

The foreman passed the indictment papers to Clerk John P. Manning, who passed them in turn to Judge Pierce. Then the Grand Jury was excused.

Charge Intimidation.

The Grand Jury investigation was instituted by District Attorney Pelletier, following the strike hearings before the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration.

James H. Vahey, counsel for the strikers, wrote a letter to Mr. Pelletier, demanding that the attention of the Suffolk Grand Jury be called to certain features of the strike and its investigation. Mr. Vahey declared that officials had intimidated men from joining the union in a manner contrary to law, also that perjury was being committed before the State Board of Arbitration in regard to whether Elevated employes had been dismissed for cause.

Mr. Pelletier called the July Grand Jury into special session. Scores of Elevated strikers testified. Then Elevated officials, from President Bancroft down, were summoned. When division superintendents did not answer summonses promptly, capias warrants were secured.

RAPID PROGRESS MADE IN PLAN FOR OLD L MEN TO RETURN TO WORK

After a conference this morning between James H. Vahey, counsel for the striking Elevated employes; Fred E. Snow, counsel for the Elevated, and Fred Fay, leader of the strike, held in Mr. Vahey's office, it was announced that through mutual agreement between the counsel a large amount of the preliminary arrangements for the men returning to work had been settled.

Another conference will be held this afternoon at the conclusion of which there will be but little work for the Board of Arbitration and Conciliation to settle tomorrow morning.

While refusing to say just what took place at the conference, Mr. Vahey said:

"By mutual agreement we have arranged what men will return to work, the time they will return, and the rating which they will receive. We have completed a tremendous amount of the preliminary work, and there should be very little work for the arbitration board."

GET SUSPECT IN MAINE DEATH CASE

BANGOR, Me., July 31.—J. Sherman Gray, who was captured through the ruse of a farmer's wife in the town of Brooks, was brought here today by Sheriff White of Penobscot county, and placed in jail on the charge of slaying fourteen-year-old Naomi Mitchell of North Carmel.

Gray, who has eluded posses comprising 500 men for days, admits his identity, but denies all knowledge of the crime. It is probable that Mrs. Hall, who payed the way for the man's capture, will receive the $500 reward offered by Sheriff White.

Gray said today that he had been on the road between Brooks and Carmel doing odd bits of work at different places since he left his home last week. He wore the same clothing as when he disappeared a week ago. His face was scratched, and his feet were sore and blistered from wearing rubber boots.

ARBITER MEETS MILL STRIKERS

NEW BEDFORD, July 31.—Charles G. Wood of this city, a member of the State Board of Arbitration, conferred with representatives of the mill owners and striking operatives here today seeking a tentative plan as the first step in a settlement of the strike. Commissioner Wood also talked with representatives of the New Bedford Ministers' Association and business men generally, regarding an effective way to settle the strike.

The tentative plan discussed today is the suggestion of the State Board of Arbitration. This afternoon the Textile Council met in special session to act on the plan. Tonight the Weavers' Union meets and the matter may be put up to it.

Today twenty-three collectors began soliciting funds in New England mill centres for the benefit of the 13,000 striking mill operatives here.

MOTORIST CAUGHT, TRIED AND FINED OVER TELEPHONE

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 31.—Mainland magistrates are dispensing justice by wire. The scheme had its inception when William J. Lee, a motorist, hit it up through Elwood, bagged all speed limits. Squire Carver saw him flash by his office and telephoned Squire Weeks of Pleasantville. Weeks sprinted out to the Shore road just in time to halt Lee.

When they reached Weeks' office the squire called up Carver and explained that he had the speeder.

"Send him back to Elwood," shouted Carver. Lee demurred and asked that the trial be had in Pleasantville. The prisoner accordingly was put on the phone. He was accused, pleaded guilty and fined $15 by wire. He paid the fine to Weeks.

PARENTS SEEK MISSING GIRL

The AMERICAN today was asked to help in an effort to find Ethel Silverman, a fifteen-year-old girl, who has been missing from her home, No. 65 Webster street, East Boston, since July 8.

Although the police have been active in the quest for the pretty girl, they have found no trace of her.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Silverman, the parents, today sought the aid of the AMERICAN. "Please find my daughter," sobbed Mrs. Silverman.

The girl left the Summer home of the family on Beachview avenue, Saugus, to go to her East Boston home to get a Summer dress.

"I learned that she had packed some clothes in a suit case and had taken a ticket for Springfield," said Mrs. Silverman.

The Springfield police could find no trace of her. She is rather slightly built and has black hair and black eyes.

WHY 13 Is Unlucky!

You knew it was unlucky. But you didn't know WHY. Science has found the reason, and the information is FREE.

Do you know why dinner parties of thirteen are fatal?

Science has explained it.

To find the answer, you must get the American Sunday Magazine. You don't have to buy it. It's FREE, with next Sunday's AMERICAN.

The August number of the American Sunday Magazine is replete with masterpieces of literature by noted authors of today. It is filled with paintings of America's best illustrators.

The cover design, in colors, by Philip Boileau, is worth framing. The Raining Girls, two of them; one is red and the other is green—and both in the surf.

"A pale and most unhappy bride awaited her bridegroom in the boudoir at a few minutes to 8 o'clock."

That's the way Chapter XXIX. of Elinor Glyn's romantic serial story, "Why?" begins. The English author of "Three Weeks" has written a thrilling story of European love and intrigue. Edmund Frederick, the famous artist, illustrates the story.

"The Fool Sticks Father With a Glue Factory" is the very appropriate appellation for a funny story by Lewis Allen, a Boston writer.

"Parisian Children," a story by Genevieve Morris, carries full to delight both the children and their elders.

There's a danger in picnic parties, according to Grace Tabor. No, I don't all is overeating, so now that this is the picnic season, read the final answer.

Then there's a Lost Gold Mine. Maybe somebody may get a clew to it in the American Sunday Magazine.

All of these, and a lot of other gems of their kind will be FREE with next Sunday's AMERICAN.

MRS. LINEHAN MAKES APPEAL

Mrs. Delia Linehan of South Boston, with her six children, appeared before the pardon committee of the Executive Council today and pleaded for a pardon for her husband, former Senator Frank J. Linehan, who is serving two years at Deer Island for city lumber frauds. Action was deferred for two weeks.

The plea of the mother and the older children was pathetic. The oldest of the children is twelve and the youngest nine months old. The mother repeated her statements made to her letter to Governor Foss. She declared that at times the family was in need of shoes and clothing, and sometimes of food.

PASSING WAGON HURTS WOMAN IN ELECTRIC

Miss Bridet McCue of No. 86 Chestnut Hill avenue, Brookline, was slightly injured today on a Chestnut Hill car on Boylston street, near Walnut park. A forestry wagon belonging to the town of Brookline and loaded with trees was passing along the streets. A branch of one of the trees struck the car window at which Miss McCue was sitting and hit the young woman a glancing blow on the arm.

SOUTHERNER TO RUN WITH T. R.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 31.—Colonel Roosevelt announced today that a Southern Democrat will be nominated for Vice-President on the National Progressive ticket, if a good man can be found.

"We are looking for such a man," he said, "but haven't found him yet."

With a Southerner as him running mate on the ticket, the Colonel hopes to break into the "Solid South" and attract voters who otherwise would support Woodrow Wilson.

The effort of the Taft forces in Kansas to keep the Roosevelt candidates for electors off the ballots at the primaries in that state next Tuesday was roundly scored today in a statement dictated by the ex-President. He attacked the whole Taft organization, including Charles D. Hilles, for trying, as he put it, to prevent the voters everywhere from having an voice in their own affairs. Colonel Roosevelt showed a letter he received from William Allen White, the Kansas editor, telling of the appeal being taken by the Taft men to Federal Judge Pitney in the Kansas ballot controversy.

"Mr. White makes a strong statement of the efforts of the regulars in Kansas to invalidate the whole primary by having made the appeal to the Federal court," he said the colonel. "The Kansas people feel that the appeal cannot be successful and that it is a final illustration of the wicked way in which the effort is made to twist the Constitution so as to cause it to protect privilege as against the people instead of the people against privilege.

"This is only an effort by Mr. Taft's managers in Kansas to use the Supreme Court in order to deny to the people of Kansas the right of referendum under the Kansas laws as to what was done at the Chicago convention. Kansas being the only State in the Union where such referendum may be had through a legally conducted primary."

The ex-president found himself what embarrassed today over the report that John M. Parker, Democrat, of Louisiana, will be the permanent chairman of the third party convention. Parker is to be one of the seconders of the Colonel's nomination for the presidency. It would not do, the Colonel remarked to have him perform both offices.

No city in this country gives one a better idea of how strict traffic may be regulated than does Providence, R. I. The Providence police authorities have solved this problem to their entire satisfaction and it really would be a good thing if the Boston authorities accepted some ideas that are now in vogue in that city.

The time is coming when this traffic question in Boston will receive more consideration at the hands of the authorities than it does at the present time and the sooner it comes the better it will be for all concerned.

The regulating of traffic applies not only to the motor and horse-drawn vehicles, but likewise to pedestrians, the latter being fully as subjected to control as the former.

The extent to which an up-to-date factory can become almost a little city in itself is abundantly illustrated in the new plant of the Imperial Automobile Company of Jackson, Mich. This factory, which has a total capacity output of 10,000 or more cars a year, is equipped with a compressed air system that operates power drills and other machinery in all parts of the factory. It has a gasoline pumping system which pipes fuel to all the testing devices. It has its own water system, including sprinkler system, both for consumption and for fire protection; and it has its own electric-lighting system. In this way the buildings are safeguarded against accidents of all sorts.

CALLS COLONEL A 'HOLDUP' MAN

WASHINGTON, July 31.—In the second of a series of campaign speeches now being made in Congress by Taft Republicans against Theodore Roosevelt, Representative Richard Hartholdt of Missouri today characterized the leader of the Bull Moose party as a man who had tried to rush the presidential nomination out of his party and whose progressive organization had "a lie for its birthright." The Missourian charged the Roosevelt men had attempted to contest elections of delegations where there was no valid excuse for such action. He cited California and Washington as two States where it had been indisputably shown that the Taft delegates had been honestly elected.

Mr. Hartholdt explained his knowledge of these cases by stating that he held the posts of Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel in the national committee.

"I shall not refer," he said, "to the cases of men who have grown tired of their party affiliation and who it convinced against their will would be of the same opinion still, nor shall I take notice of the unjust declarations brazenly reiterated on this floor a few days ago to appease a troubled conscience. But I do deem it proper and timely to throw some light on the political situation by examining the papers which are trying to throttle the Republican party.

"Do you believe the National Committee would have devoted ten days to their painstaking and exhausting work if they could have realized that there was but one Republican candidate before the convention? Would wide publicity have been allowed? Would all of the meetings been held openly?

"Many delegates had their misgivings. They remembered that in the widely advertised Columbus speech the name Republican was not even mentioned, but they still felt confident that no man would have the audacity to ask for a Presidential nomination at the hands of a Republican convention when at heart he was no longer a Republican. In the light of later events we know that this was a case of misplaced confidence; in other words, that Mr. Roosevelt never intended to abide the decision of the convention except he himself should be the nominee. We know now it was an ordinary bolting.

MAYOR TALKS WITH WILSON

NEW YORK, July 31.—Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, of Boston, visited Democratic national headquarters in the Fifth avenue building, and told of a telephone conversation he had with Governor Wilson about the nominee's tariff views.

"I was talking to the Governor over the phone today," said Mayor Fitzgerald, "and we discussed his message of acceptance and the tariff reference in it. The message will advocate a sensible tariff revision, which will be sincere, and one that will appeal strongly to the people. The Governor does not declare for free trade, but for a tariff bill which will put a stop to the enrichment of the private interests at the expense of the people."

Fitzgerald scouted the idea that Colonel Roosevelt has a chance of carrying any New England State.

Colonel McCombs said after the meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Committee that the personnel of various subcommittees would be announced in a few days.

Major Fitzgerald was the most enthusiastic out of town Democrat yet to put in an appearance at the new and partly furnished headquarters and he was loudly cheered as cigars and bright straighten out the somewhat bare rooms into which the Executive Committee of the National Committee moved.

Speaking of Massachusetts politics, he declared that Governor Foss would be reelected and that the Democrats would win the Congressional elections. He asserted, too, that Wilson would sweep the State.

Roger I. Sherman Quits G. O. P. Club

Roger I. Sherman, of Brookline, who is strong for the "Bull Moose" party, has resigned from the Massachusetts Republican Club.

During the Republican convention in Chicago, he extended courtesy cards to the members of the Massachusetts delegation at the Iroquois Club.

Because of the developments there, he left the city a strong Roosevelt man.

Yesterday he received from the Republican Clubs of Massachusetts, a circular saying that it was his duty to vote for the re-election of Taft. He at once sent his resignation in the following letter:

The Republican Club of Massachusetts, No. 19 Milk street, Boston, Mass.:

Gentlemen—I hereby tender my resignation as a member of the Republican Club of Massachusetts.

I have always been a staunch Republican, and up to recently have fought for the principles it professed, and after being an eye-witness to the procedure at the recent National Republican convention at Chicago, I cannot any longer support the same or be a party to the acts of that convention.

Being a traveling man, and having since that convention covered the States of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, Missouri, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan and parts of New York State, I can safely say that the sentiment among ninety out of every one hundred traveling men who I have talked with have the same opinion as myself.

Regretting that the National Republican Committee, in order to perpetuate themselves and their acts, should sacrifice the Republican party as they have done on this occasion, I beg to remain, yours truly,

ROGER I. SHERMAN.

2 Great Bargain Aisles —Noted for Remarkable Values

ALMY REFUSAL CURTLY WORDED

I realized that their side was the one in which to dig; our side is entirely on the surface.

"When Mr. Nason says that this is done merely to educate my client, he is stretching matters. I refer your honor to the records of the last hearing when Dakota Dan was on the witness stand for twenty-one days. The papers of this case contain his entire examination and cross-examination. I would ask Mr. Mason if he expects that William C. Russell will testify to anything new now."

"If you intend by that," broke in Mr. Nason, "that I know something that he might testify to now, my answer is 'No.'"

Adjourn to Friday.

"Very well," started Mr. Scharton, "if you don't expect anything I will answer your argument by calling attention to the fact that William C. Russell's testimony at this time can in no way hurt your case in view of the fact that a typewritten transcript of his testimony submitted at the first hearing and covering some 2,400 words is also in our possession. Therefore, we need no education."

"I think," said Master Pevey, "that Mr. Scharton is not trying your case, Mr. Nason. As you say, the issue may not be whether Fresno Dan is the right man, but the petitioner, Dakota Dan, has been subjected to some severe tests, and it may be argued in his behalf that William C. Russell and Mr. Almy have a direct interest in the case of the opposite side which has raised the defence that Dakota Dan is not the man and gives force to that defence by introducing Fresno Dan as the rightful heir."

After further debate, Master Pevey decided to take the question under advisement until Friday, to which day court adjourned to permit counsel to get the records and papers of the last hearing.

The examination of the other executor, Ferdinand B. Almy, by Attorney Scharton was suspended in order to await the arrival of the documents and exhibits impounded at the first hearing in the Probate Court, which lasted six months.

Counsel for both sides visited the office of the Middlesex Probate Court, across the street, and tried to get these records but were unable to procure them owing to the absence of one of the clerks, Mr. Harris, who is on his vacation.

It is said that these exhibits from the first trial fill a packing cases. But the attorneys intend to get them at the first possible moment as reference to them is necessary to continue the examination of Executor Almy.

The courtroom was crowded today. Many spectators were standing in the lobby. The return of fair weather caused the women to come out in their finest raiment. As usual, they outnumbered the men. Every day seems to add interest to the case, as judged by the attendance.

Almy Rebukes Scharton.

Testimony of Almy, one of the executors for the late Reginald Russell estate in Brookline, to which Dakota Dan Russell is now a claimant at the hearing in East Cambridge today told William B. Scharton, Dakota Dan's counsel, that it was none of Scharton's business why Almy had not given an accounting of the estate.

"Isn't it a fact," demanded Scharton, "that you feared the appearance of the real claimant because there was a short age of funds and he would demand an accounting?"

"It is not a fact," retorted Almy.

"Why did you refuse to give an accounting?"

"None of your business."

Previous to that, while speaking of Dakota Dan's first appearance in the case, Almy was asked what interest he had.

"To see that faker is put out of the way," replied Almy.

Another time Scharton asked:

"Does William C. Russell do anything without your knowledge or consent?"

"No," answered Almy, who is co-executor of the will with William C. Russell.

Almy testified that he had seen Fresno Dan in 1880 or 1881 and did not see him again till he came forward as the claimant.

Almy said he recognized Fresno Dan at the first meeting, though he was changed.

ALMY DEFIANT ON WITNESS STAND AT SCHARTON'S QUERIES
By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

She was old and gray. But her eyes were bright and she was dressed with the care and precision of a girl. She sat to a front seat at the left of the judge's bench. She had a good view of Dakota Dan and her gaze was wistful. It was not long until the North Dakotan felt the force of the scrutiny. He looked at the aged woman and his face beamed with a smile.

When court adjourned Dakota Dan left his seat and hurried to the woman's side. Their hands met in a fervent clasp. Tears were in the woman's eyes. Her lips trembled as she exclaimed:

"My boy!"

Dakota Dan patted her on the shoulder. His white teeth glistened. They chatted long and earnestly.

She was Dakota Dan's old nurse, Margaret Ball of Charlestown. Or, at least, she was certain of it.

To Mrs. Coombs, who knows Mrs. Ball well, the aged woman said with great positiveness:

"I'd know Dan's side in a tannery!"

Halted Fresno's "Torture."

And yet William C. Russell declares that he is satisfied that the other man, Fresno Dan, is his brother. The silent man of the Russell mansion, according to his lawyers, is just as certain of Fresno Dan as he was when he stepped forward in the law office two years ago after the fruit picker had been on the rack of inquiry two days, and said:

"This torture must be stopped. This man is my brother. I have known it all along."

William Odlin, personal counsel for Fresno Dan, told me that happened—that he saw and heard it.

Which is right—The silver-haired nurse in black or the aged, mysterious man in gray?

That is what imbues the Russell birthright battle with such enticing interest. Ferdinand B. Almy, a cousin of Daniel Blake Russell and an executor with William C. Russell of the Russell estate, was recalled to the stand when the case was resumed in the East Cambridge court.

Almy Under Scharton's Fire.

"Do you keep an account of the expenditure of this case?" Mr. Scharton asked Mr. Almy today.

"Yes."

"Have you the names of persons to whom you have paid money in connection with this case?"

"Yes."

"When did you hear there was a claim out to this estate?"

"April 15, 1909."

"From whom did you receive the first intimation?"

"The First National Bank of Boston."

"Was William C. Russell notified?"

"Yes."

"What did you do as a consequence?"

"Nothing."

Mr. Almy wrote to Mr. Wing about the application something like this, testified Mr. Almy:

"Send along the claimant. We have had two or three. We would like his picture."

"Were there other claimants?"

"Yes."

"To whom did they apply?"

"To William C. Russell."

"When did you first see Dakota Dan?"

"April 27, 1909, in Mr. Upton's office."

Tells of Dakota Dan's Visit.

Mr. Almy said that Dakota Dan went to the Russell house and could not find any one. Then he went to Upton's office. Mr. Almy said that the occupants of the Russell home at the time Dakota Dan appeared were William C. Russell, Miss Sarah E. Almy and a servant girl.

"Who was this Sarah E. Almy?"

"My sister."

"Why was Miss Almy there?"

"At Mr. Russell's request. She was intimate with the family from 1891. She lived there until her death."

"Had she charge of the house?"

"Yes."

Almy said that William Russell saw Dakota Dan on April 29, 1909, in Lawyer Upton's office. Dakota Dan walked into the office and, looking at William C. Russell, said:

"This is my brother Willie."

"There was every indication that he was the right man, wasn't there?"

"Yes."

"Have you any interest in the case?"

"Yes."

"What interest?"

"To see that that faker is put out of the way."

Defends Estate Against Fakers.

"What have you done to put him out of the way in three years?"

"The State of Massachusetts should take care of malefactors. It is my business to defend the estate against all fakers."

"What did you do in settling the matter to the attention of the State?"

"Why the archive of lawyers, nothing."

Mr. Almy said that Pinkerton detectives were hired on May 8, 1909, to look up Fresno Dan. The detectives made no report about Fresno Dan and his lawyers.

Then William C. Russell "did nothing without your knowledge or consent."

"No."

"Did you recognize Fresno Dan at first?"

"Yes, at the first meeting."

Almy said he saw Fresno Dan the last time in 1880 or 1881.

Almy was asked if he had consulted District Attorney Higgins in connection with the case, and he said he had not.

"His history of Melrose didn't aid you in identifying him, did it?"

"Partly."

Almy said he was sure of Fresno Dan from physical appearance. He didn't need anything about his history, he said.

Crowd Storms Courtroom.

Almy admitted he was not exactly sure of Fresno Dan until he had talked to him.

The crowd today was the largest since the hearing began. Many could not get into the room.

"How often did you see Daniel Blake Russell in 1881?"

"Three or four days. It may have been two days."

Almy then lived in Providence. He visited the Russell home occasionally.

Almy persisted in his statement that although he had not seen Daniel Blake Russell since 1881, and then had seen him only two days, he knew him when he first met him.

"Did you try to find Daniel Blake Russell after the death of Daniel Russell?"

"I did not."

"Did Daniel Russell or his lawyers try to find him?"

"I do not know."

Mr. Almy understood Mr. Russell was not compelled by the will to share the estate with his brother.

"Although the estate was in no danger, you agreed to defray the expenses of Fresno Dan, alias Johnson, Anderson and Jones, in this case?"

"I did with William C. Russell."

"Isn't it a fact that you feared the appearance of the real claimant because there was a shortage of funds and he would demand an accounting?"

"It is not a fact."

"Why did you refuse to give an accounting?"

"None of your business."

"Are you under bond as executor in this case?"

"I am not."

Mr. Scharton wanted the exhibits in the last hearing. They were somewhere in the building, and a recess of twenty minutes was taken to allow Mr. Nason and Mr. Scharton to look for them.

One of the interested spectators of the trial has been Herman D. Murphy, the Harvard instructor. He declares that Dakota Dan is the son of Daniel Russell. Mr. Murphy reached this conclusion from a careful study of the photographs of Daniel Russell and Dakota Dan published in the AMERICAN.

The lawyers returned to court after a hunt for the exhibits and reported they could not be found. It seems that all those who knew where the exhibits are were on their vacations. There is a truck-load of the exhibits.

W. C. Russell on Stand.

William C. Russell was called to the stand at 11:45.

"Your full name?"

"William Clifton Russell."

"How old are you?"

"Fifty-four."

"Occupation?"

"I have none."

"Were you ever engaged in any business?"

"No."

"Where were you born?"

"Melrose—this state?"

"How many children were there?"

"Two—myself and Daniel Blake Russell. I was four years older than Daniel Blake Russell."

"Were you and your brother, Daniel, always on good terms?"

"Yes."

"Were you and Daniel friendly as boys?"

"Yes. He was not in the same school I was."

Mr. Russell said he attended high school two years and his brother was less than a year in high school.

BEWARE THE ZIBELINE

By MORTON BIRGE.

(FASHION NOTE—"Long-haired zibelines are in again.")

"Oh! Officer, he's in again—the long-haired zibeline!
We told 'em to be careful, but we fear it is too late.
We heard the zibeline was loose and that he had been seen
Rampaging 'round this neighborhood like some avenging fate.

Beware the long-haired zibeline. 'Tis only fools who mock
And say the zibeline is dead. Right now he's in again.
I never saw a zibeline, nor e'en a Jabberwock,
But for that matter, never have a lot of other men.

The zibeline's an awful thing. His hair is long and queer,
And you just ought to see him when he's swinging down the pike.
We'll give you some more details of the zibeline's career,
As soon as we can find out what a zibeline is like.

City Solicitor of Waltham May Sue His Predecessor

City Solicitor Thomas F. Kearns of Waltham and his immediate predecessor, Thomas F. Carey, disagree on a little matter of whether the city owns a piece of land or whether Mr. Carey owns it.

The lot is on Columbus avenue, which was widened last year. Mr. Kearns says that the city paid Mr. Carey twenty-five cents a foot, or $2,927, for the land, taking full right and title.

Mr. Carey says the city paid only for a release from all damage suits. The Finance Committee handled the matter, but Mr. Carey, in his capacity of City Solicitor at the time, drew the order for the taking of the land. City Solicitor Kearns has drawn papers in preparation for a suit and says he will file the suit if Mr. Carey doesn't give the city a title to the land or refund the money.

PIPE DREAMS

By H. M. WALKER

OUR champions are on the run but they are headed in the wrong direction. The club owners are going instead of running.

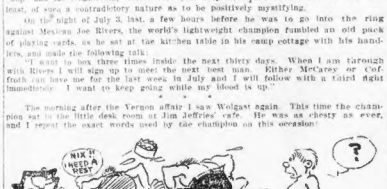
We have five "regular fighters" with crowns tilted over their left ears. The white flag flies over the whole flock. They look upon a challenge from a legitimate opponent as a personal insult.

Personally the case of Ad Wolgast is the one that calls for an extra shot of "hop" and the longest stay before the open fireplace. All's actions are, to say the least, of such a contradictory nature as to be positively mystifying.

On the night of July 3, last, a few hours before he was to go into the ring against Mexican Joe Rivers, the world's lightweight champion fumbled an old pack of playing cards, as he sat at the kitchen table in his camp cottage with his handlers, and made the following talk:

"I want to box three times inside the next thirty days. When I am through with Rivers I will sign up to meet the next best man. Either McCarey or Coffroth can have me for the last week in July and I will follow with a third fight immediately. I want to keep going while my blood is up."

The morning after the Vernon affair I saw Wolgast again. This time the champion sat in the little desk room at Jim Jeffries' cafe. He was as chesty as ever, and I repeat the exact words used by the champion on this occasion:



"I am the toughest son-of-a-gun in the world," said Ad with an air of confidence. "I am just as good as I ever was and these fellows that have been yelling for a contest at 'em can now be accommodated. Just show me the money and I'll go to work."

Since that date every effort has been exhausted to pull Wolgast back into the ring with Rivers. He has reversed himself. He takes the stand that he needs several months of rest and that he will not box again until early in 1913.

The man most entitled to a match with Wolgast is Joe Rivers. Willie Ritchie was the next best claim on the champion's attention. Ad has met both these boys and the only logical reason that can be assigned for his temporary retirement is that the fear of a possible defeat troubles him in his dreams.

He that as it may, the world's 133-pound king has granted himself a long vacation, leaving it to the pluckers to pull the wool, figuratively speaking, and thereby taking the interest away from this division.

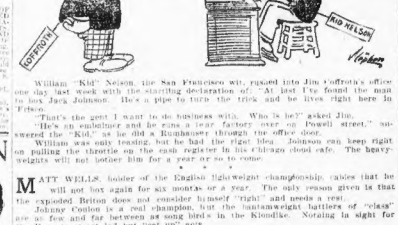
JOHNNY KILBANE is another young man who is answering all challenges with a "Let George do it" brand of blarney. Johnny promised that after taking a short rest he would give Abraham Attell a return battle for the featherweight title.

Promoter McCarey was willing to give Kilbane and Attell the Labor Day date, but Johnnie has answered that he would prefer to wait until after the Christmas holidays before risking his crown. Here is another title gripper who would rather not be held go to seed than to come into the open and take an honest chance.

The good people of Kilbane's home town, Cleveland, have lavished their attentions upon Johnny. This hero worship is the very breath of life to Kilbane now and naturally he wishes to prolong it as far as possible. He realizes that in meeting Attell, when Abe is at his best, he is taking a big risk. Matches with coroneted third rate pugs, adding the additions to the Kilbane bank roll. Consequently he will defer the meeting with Attell to a date far distant.

JACK JOHNSON faces another long period of inactivity. Some of the critics who got through the Las Vegas show claim that the heavyweight champion is "going back" and that his retirement is simply an excuse.

With the possible exception of Al Palzer, the heavyweight situation remains just the same as it did on that gloomy evening in Reno, two years ago. Johnson has the heavyweight class all to himself with no possible rival in sight.



William "Kid" Nelson, the San Francisco wit, rushed into Jim Coffroth's office one day last week with the startling declaration of: "At last I've found the man to box Jack Johnson. He's a pipe to turn the trick and he lives right here in Frisco."

"That's the gent I want to do business with. Who is he?" asked Jim.

"He's an embalmer and he runs a bier factory over on Powell street," answered the "Kid," as he did a Rumhauser through the office door.

William was only teasing, but he had the right idea. Johnson can keep right on pulling the throttle on the cash register in his Chicago cloud cafe. The heavyweights will not bother him for a year or so to come.

MATT WELLS, holder of the English lightweight championship, cables that he will not box again for six months or a year. The only reason given is that the exploded Briton does not consider himself "right" and needs a rest.

Johnny Conlon is a real champion, but the bantamweight battlers of "release" are so few and far between at any stand in the Klondike. Nothing in sight for the Emmett street lad but "set up" acts.

So much for the five title holders. As the rawboned dame on the Orpheum circuit would say, "All dolled up with no place to go."

The orchestra will kindly cut in with the old time favorite, "Please go 'way and let me sleep."

RED SOX OPEN WITH ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 31.—Jake Stahl certainly was glad that he had the Browns to tackle today. Because that pitching staff of his did not show to good advantage in Chicago and the boss of the Red Sox figured that a four days' stand against the lowly Browns would give him an opportunity of getting it back to where it was before this Western trip was started.

Three of the star twirlers of the Red Sox were hammered from the slab in the series between the two brands of hose. Joe Wood was sent to the cleaners in the Sunday game. Ray Collins was hammered to a farewell in the Monday contest and had to be rescued. Charles Hall was easy for the White Sox in the concluding game of that series. Both Pape and Bedient did rescue work. The latter went to the slab in the seventh and held the Chicago lads runless all the way. Hall was pounded for five runs and six hits in the four sessions that he occupied the slab.

Big Surprise for Browns.

The pounding of the twirlers sure was some surprise for the fellow who is a Summer resident of Boston and a Winter banker in Chicago. Stahl can't understand it. When the team left the East the pitchers were in great shape and the fact that the White Sox hammered them was all the more surprising. Had it been the Tigers the Boston leader would have thought nothing of it because they are in the habit of walloping the pitchers. Not so the White Sox. The manager isn't inclined to believe that the showing of his twirlers is likely to become infectious and he still can't see a cloud in the pennant sky.

Despite the fact that the Red Sox were beaten, 6 to 5, in Chicago, on Tuesday, they still retain their six games lead. True, the Washington Senators trimmed by half game because they were idle. But the Senators also were idle on Monday, when the Red Sox played and won, and that makes that part of it a standoff.

Stahl a Bit too Late.

The following from Boston figure they have rather the best of it for the remainder of the week. They have the pull and Browns for their opponents, while the Senators fight the Detroit Tigers and the Athletics end the week. If there is any form in baseball, then the Washington and Philadelphia lads will have tougher opponents than the leaders.

Stahl was a bit uncertain who he would send in the slab today. His plans were all disarranged in Chicago. He expected to open here with Bedient. But it became necessary to use that young man in the last game against the White Sox. Since O'Brien did relief duty on the day before he became ineligible. It looked very much today as if Joe Wood, who worked five innings on Sunday, would be requested to go in and demonstrate that his showing on that day was an accident. The Red Sox certainly gave a beautiful exhibition of uphill fighting in that final game at Chicago. When the seventh dawned the score was 6 to 0 against Stahl's crew. Walsh was pitching alright ball, and they didn't seem to be a chance. A two-base error by Weaver on Stahl and hits by Wagner and Vanamaker put two Red Sox across the pan. Then came some fireworks. Yerkes opened the eighth with a base hit, and Speaker and Lewis followed with the same. Gardner drove out a double, and three runs came in. The score was now 6 to 5, and a Boston rush was on second with none out. Walsh settled immediately, and the Boston lads failed to get over the run which would have tied it up.

RILEY'S COLUMN

RED SOX PILGRIMS

IT was a game rally, but the Red Sox were just nosed out under the wire, 6 to 5, in their last struggle with the White Sox. The rival Sox now stand: Red, 11; White 5. No doubt about the relative value of those two teams. They meet next in Boston August 26.

* * *

JAKE STAHL has taken his baseball players down to St. Louis, where they begin their annual mid-Summer campaign with the Browns. It's probably hot enough to boil eggs in the streets of the town in which the amber fluid is supposed to flow like water. So the Sox will play under a handicap, because they're used to the east winds. But the Senators, after a two-days' lay-off, are scheduled to fall foul of the Tigers today, and there is another chance to draw away from them within the next four days.

* * *

NOTWITHSTANDING their loss yesterday, the Red Sox are six games in front of Washington yet, and they ought to make it four straight from St. Louis, while the Senators drop at least one in Detroit.

* * *

WOOD, Collins and Hall, all showed signs of wavering before the White Sox, but none of them far enough bad to cause much uneasiness in the Red Sox camp. Hall made a reputation for quick action in relieving Wood and Collins, but he lingered a bit too long with Hall.

* * *

WOOD and Hall showed symptoms of being a bit "stale" before they went away, but O'Brien and Collins looked like they were in splendid form. Bedient, too, looked a bit slow, but he went along all right Sunday, so it is possible he lingered with the Chicago "Cuffies" case. It is likely the White Sox were ripe for left-handed pitching.

* * *

THERE is not so much reason to worry about the pitchers, though, because they have stood up under the strain of having to win games without much hitting or run-getting behind them during the past two weeks. In the week ended yesterday, for instance, the Red Sox made but 29 runs, Washington, with 38. Detroit, with 41; New York, with 36, and St. Louis, with 30, all beat them. Washington played one more game than the Red Sox. Notwithstanding the dearth of runs, the Red Sox won four out of the six games played, and it is probable that that average, carried out to the end, will win the pennant.

* * *

THE Pilgrims broke into the limelight yesterday by winning a fourteen-inning game, 7 to 6, and finished the St. Louis series with two in three games to their credit. It is long time since Johnny Ward's boys took the long end of the series. But this game need not have gone fourteen innings. Possibly the "spit-ball" had it won, 6 to 5, in the ninth, but let down too soon and, before he could get on his feet again, the Cardinals had tied it up.

* * *

KING won the game himself. When a pitcher can win a game which hitter Jake is a hero or a martyr. He takes a chance at being bidded to desist if he does what pinch hitters are for, and he's got to make good. With Sweeney on second and one gone, King withdrew Titus, a left-hander who was faring Saltee, a left-handed pitcher, and substituted himself. He sent a single rambling through Hooper, and Sweeney, being on his toes, crossed the plate with the winning tally.

* * *

BRESNAHAN figures that he tied the game by substituting Ellis for Harmon in the ninth. Ellis started the little rally that tied it up. But Donnelly was actually responsible, for with a game within his grasp, and a sure forecast at right, he threw Konetchy's grounder wild to Melton and, after, when Evans grounded to Derrick, he failed to make an effort to cover first, two runs being the result.

* * *

TYLER was substituted for Donnelly and pitched air-tight baseball to the finish, backed by superb fielding. Geyer was substituted for Harmon and did not do so well, being helped out of some tight places by excellent fielding, particularly in the tenth, when, with the bases filled and one out, the side was retired.

* * *

IN the fourteenth, with first and second occupied and two gone, Bresnahan sent to as a pinch hitter Ted Tyler wisely passed him. He sent up Bliss to bat for Geyer, and Sweeney caught him out. Then "Rabbit" chipped Willis to the mound and went behind the out himself.

* * *

IN the fifth Sweeney was on first when Jackson doubled to right. Bill raced for home, but Jackson's bat lay on the base line, fifteen feet from the plate. Bill slowed up on Jackson's unfinished whether to slide or jump, and Evans's throw beat him by a few inches, cutting off the run.

Mensor, Ex-Boxer, With the Pirates

Midget Mensor, who played around California in the days of the outlaws, has broken into the National League like a young comet out of a clear sky. Mensor's work with Nick Williams in the Northwest League was so brilliant that a Pittsburgh scout came along last month and offered him a fancy figure for the Oakland boy.

Nick closed the deal and Mensor reported to Pittsburgh and was put in the game at once. Although an infielder by trade, Fred Clarke stuck the youngster in right field. The other day, in a game in Brooklyn, he got a double, a triple and a single. Mensor is no bigger than a drop of water, but the Northern critics give him credit for being a wonderful little artist.

Mensor led the National League batters after playing twelve games with the Pirates.

His departure is said to have materially weakened top Portland club. Before Mensor became a diamond star he was something of a prize fighter. The Oakland sports used to give up their good money to see him spar in the short bouts over there, and he was quite clever.

If Mensor had a few pounds more weight in his chances of becoming a major league star would be improved. The vast majority of the players up there are large athletes, but Mensor may get away with it, small as he is. Some have.

BRADEN DIRECT SETS NEW MARK

CLEVELAND, O., July 31.—Braden Direct, 2.06¾, just four years old, and crowned 6,000 race-goers at North Randall by lowering the world's record for a four-year-old pacing colt, when he won the second heat of the $2,000 Forest City Stake, 2.06 class, yesterday.

Just eighteen years ago at Sioux City, Ia., Online, driven against time, paced a mile in 2.04. The report that a four-year-old had made that time found many doubters, and that the skeptical had some ground for views is indicated by the years this record weathered the storm of attack.

Yesterday, after finishing ninth in the first heat, this newest champion of the Brown Hal tribe raced past the fleet Ginger, the fast but erratic Dan Patch and the swift Branham Baughman and shot under the wire a winner by a safe margin. He had moved up from sixth position to catch the Cox pacer, Branham Baughman, ten yards from the wire.

Few realized the significance of the time—2.06¾—until Starling Judge Frank Walker announced that a world's record had been made.

The Americans, who are satisfied with the behavior of their rifles, have decided not to compete in the international team match tomorrow.

The tournament in 1913 will be held in Ohio.

Leader Tarrasch and Rubinstein Play Draw

Russian Chess Champion in Fourth Position After Eleventh Round. Marshall Tied for Fifth Place.

BRESLAU, July 31.—Play in the eleventh round of the international chess masters' tournament was of unusually high interest in consequence of the meeting between Dr. Tarrasch of Nuremberg and A. K. Rubinstein, the Russian champion. They did not reach a conclusion, and their game is pending after a very hard struggle occupying the entire two sessions of play.

Dr. Tarrasch remained in the lead, but Teichmann, who defeated Breyer, equalled his total number of points. Schlechter, the Austrian champion, also passed Rubinstein and Marshall, by administering defeat to the United States champion. The American dropped to a tie for fifth place with Duras. The latter took the adjourned game from Rubinstein, and also secured his game scheduled in the eleventh round with Spielmann.

After eleven rounds the scores of the competitors are as follows:

| | W. | L. | | W. | L. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Tarrasch | 8½ | 2½ | Breyer | 5 | 6 |

SPIKING LAID TO OLD GRUDGE

SPRINGFIELD, July 31.—An investigation has been started into the spiking of "Tucker" Genest, of the Springfield club by Jimmie Curry of the Holyoke club in the game yesterday and court action is threatened. It is claimed that the spiking was the result of an old grudge between the two players and had been carefully planned by the Holyoke player.

Genest is at the Holyoke City Hospital crippled for life as far as baseball playing is concerned with a double fracture of the leg about four inches below the knee.

Manager Zeller of the Springfield club claims the spiking was deliberate and said he would have a warrant sworn out for the arrest of Curry. He is thoroughly incensed over the circumstances and declared that Curry should be blacklisted forever by organized baseball.

Zeller was particularly strong in his denunciation of what in terms one of the most brutal things that ever happened on a diamond, and was especially bitter against Manager O'Neil of the Holyoke club.

He declares the assault a result of O'Neil's fighting tactics on the diamond and of his alleged general policy of urging his players to "get" somebody. Zeller claims Curry had his spikes sharpened for the butchering, and he says he has witnesses that the whole thing was premeditated.

"Those spikes were especially prepared for trouble," says Zeller, "and before the game Curry showed them with much satisfaction to the Holyoke players. In getting Genest he came down with his heel on Genest's legs so that he could have greater results.

Curry denies any intention to injure Genest and says the spiking was an accident.

World Bike Champion to Race Drobach Here

Bike fans at the Revere track next Saturday night will see in action a real world's champion sprinter, one whose name is known wherever there is a bicycle track, and it is the first time in years that one has been seen here.

The sprinter is Emile Friol of France, who is the real article in the short distance game and the one man who is figured to have a chance of beating Frank Kramer, the American champion, in the world's championship races which will be held in Newark next month.

Friol is in the country about three weeks and has ridden two races at the Newark track and won both of them. On Sunday last he rode Frank Cavanaugh, the runner-up in the American championship, and what he did to Cavanagh will spoil the latter's European trip.

On Saturday night Friol will ride a match race with Pete Drobach, the sensational South Boston sprinter, who is a big winner of Newark. Pete has a long, hard sprint, and he will try hard to trim Friol.

Many Double-Headers Booked in N.E. League

The consideration of double-headers was the principal business before the directors of the New England Baseball League at their meeting last night at the American House.

The league sanctioned the playing of a double-header between Brockton and Lynn on Saturday, August 10, one game being transferred from Brockton, it being impossible to play the game in that city, as there is no open date.

Double-headers were also arranged to be played as follows: Lawrence at Haverhill, Saturday, August 10; Haverhill at Lawrence, Saturday, August 17, and Worcester at Haverhill, Monday, August 19.

London S.C. Would Sign Kilbane and Driscoll

Evidently Mr. "Peggy" Bettinson is bound to have the featherweight title won or lost at "headquarters." If reports from there are to be relied upon. Offers of a twenty-round bout between Jem Driscoll, the best that England boasts of in the featherweight line, and Johnny Kilbane have been received from there.

Whether or not the National Sporting Club management will succeed in inducing the Cleveland boy to cross the ocean and take the big dip is a question. There is so much soft money to be accumulated on the shores of his native land that even a trip to England might interfere with his plans.

The amounts offered by Bettinson are not in keeping with those the promoters of fights in America are forced to deliver. The British have still a sort of hallucination that to give an opportunity to a pugilist to appear before an exclusive membership such as the National Club is quite an honor instead of the cheap behind the fists.

AMERICAN Y. C. OPEN RACES.

NEWBURYPORT, July 31.—The annual open races of the American Yacht Club will be held on Monday, August 5. The event has long been known as Newburyport day and attracts many yachtsmen from various ports along the coast.

OLYMPIC STARS AT HOME AGAIN

NEW YORK, July 31.—While steamer whistles shrieked a salute the Red Star liner Vaderland moved up the river to her dock today bearing forty-three members of the party that represented the United States at the Olympic games at Stockholm.

When the victorious athletes landed they found awaiting them the greatest crowd that ever gathered at the busiest docks in America. Thousands cheered the Yankee stars as they disembarked and were greeted by the reception committee. The party was made up of twenty-four track and field athletes, sixteen marksmen and three fencers. All expressed their pleasure at again reaching American shores, from which they departed on June 14.

Among them were C. D. Reidpath of Syracuse University, winner of the 400 metre race; Gaston Strobino, who ran third in the Marathon; R. T. Bird, P. J. Delf, C. S. Edmundson, J. Ersleben, H. Hollowell, Sergeant W. A. Leshner, John Paul Jones, Lieutenant-Colonel W. Libbey, Sergeant H. L. Adams, Captain E. A. Anderson, Captain C. L. Burdett, Simon F. Gillis, Sergeant J. E. Jackson, Hugh F. Mehlig, A. M. Sparks, J. R. Nicholson, N. S. Taber, L. Tewanima, James T. Wendell, Major Charles E. Whitney, L. A. Whitney and H. T. Worthington.

The athlete who probably received the most attention was Gaston Strobino, the young lad who finished third in the Marathon run. His ability to finish third in this event, which was participated in by the best runners in the world, was looked upon almost as penalty by his Paterson, N. J., friends as though he had finished first.

There were delegates on the pier from various athletic clubs and colleges throughout the country to congratulate their representatives for their individual achievement.

BURNS WILL DEFEND TITLE.

CALGARY, Alta., July 31.—Tommy Burns, former champion heavyweight pugilist, announced his intention to make an attempt to regain the title. Burns said:

"Now that Johnson has retired, the title reverts to the white race, and I am prepared to defend it."

Men Who Stand
Need an O-P-C

An O-P-C suspensory is an essential to men who are much on their feet.

There is too much drain on the nerve force without it. You can't afford the waste.

Even men who stand little lose half their energy through this needless drain.

Austin Was First to Engage in Glove Bout

Silver-Haired Vancouver Resident Principal in First Match Under Marquis of Queensberry Rules.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 31.—One of the most distinguished sportsmen in the world is a visitor in this city in the person of Albert Austin, of Vancouver, B. C. He claims the distinction of being one of the principals in the first match ever made under the Marquis of Queensberry rules of boxing and once held the middleweight championship of England.

Austin is sixty-seven years old, but barring his silvery locks he easily would pass for forty. He is about six feet tall and as straight as an Indian and a living testimonial to the right manner of living and its splendid effects upon the physical man. He is a wealthy retired business man of the British Columbia metropolis.

Austin has not had a glove on his hands in thirty years, having laid them aside in 1882. It was in 1878 that he won the middleweight championship in England by default of William Brooks, then champion, who refused to meet him. Under the rules in those days a champion had to defend his title against challengers within sixty days after receiving the challenge. Brooks refused to meet Austin, who then was unbeaten as an amateur.

Flynn and Barry at Pilgrim A.A. Tuesday

The Pilgrim A. A. will reopen next Tuesday evening with a good show in the heavyweight class. Matchmaker Alex. McLean has signed Jim Barry of Chicago to clash with Danny (Porky) Flynn of this city for a ten-round bout and this should be a bout with much fireworks.

Porky Flynn recently returned from a trip to Australia, where he had several battles, one a fourteen-round affair with Sam Langford. Porky has a large following in this city who have not seen him work for a long time and all want to get a glimpse at him to see if he has improved while in the state of Sam Langford. Barry has also just returned from Australia, where he gave Langford a hard battle.

Barry has appeared in this city on several occasions and each time drew the fans a big run for their money. He is one of the best white heavyweights in the country today and will give Danny Flynn about all the argument he can handle. McLean is working up a star set of preliminaries. With this heavyweight show as a starter, McLean appears to have gotten a great beginning to make a reputation for himself as matchmaker.

Wolgast-McFarland to Meet in September

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 31.—Lightweight Champion Ad Wolgast today announced that he would fight Packey McFarland in New York September 22 or 27, and that he would receive $22,500 for his end of the mill.

For this sum, Wolgast says, he has agreed to waive his right to the moving pictures—or any other compensation. Packey will have to worry along with $7,000.

The match is to be staged at the Garden A. C., Ad Wolgast asserts. He said final details had been finished by long distance by Matchmaker Bill Gibson. Packey is to be allowed to make 135 pounds before the battle.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

THE ETERNAL QUESTION

By FRANCIS L. GARSIDE

THE friends of a married woman meet her for the first time in years, and they ask her a question like this:

"How many children have you now?"

If she says "Eight!" some friends exclaim, in tones of horror, "Well, why on earth did you have so many?"

Other friends, who are extremely old-fashioned and, therefore, rare, say in pious tones, "Well the Lord HAS been good to you!"

Which leaves the mother of eight without a word to say.

Just when friends of a spin, meet her for the first time in years, they ask in the tones of one who knows, "How does it happen you have never married?"

It is the eternal question every spin-sheets on every eternal occasion, and the degree of pity in which it is asked never varies, the mother of eight expressing as much pity as the mother of one.

Daysey Mayme Appleton has met this question every day since she passed twenty-five. Let it be known to her credit that she never looked at her married friends with a question of amaze, and replied with the question, "How does it happen YOU have?"

She Makes Up Her Mind

But recently she made up her mind she would answer the eternal question. She would tell the whole story.

She called on a friend, the mother of nine. The mother of nine used a baby's dress to wipe molasses candy off a chair which she handed her caller.

She prepared to feed the youngest, after slapping her seventh for pulling the hair of the eighth, and giving the eighth a cookie to console it. Then she sat back in her chair and looked with pity at Daysey Mayme. "How does it happen," she asked, "that you have never married?"

Daysey Mayme was prepared.

"When I was nineteen," she began, as one who has a long story to tell, I was engaged to Phil Burbeck, and he"——

"Stop teasing that cat!" screamed the mother of nine. "And—Johnny, if you take another cookie from the jar I'll whip you."

"Excuse me," she said to her caller. "Now do go on."

"And he," resumed Daysey Mayme, "didn't like it because I flirted with"——

The mother of nine left her chair abruptly, so abruptly that she deposited the ninth on Daysey Mayme's lap before it had finished its dinner. Which made it set up a howl. She grabbed her fifth by the arm, and her fourth by one leg, and dragged them, screaming, to the door, cuffing both as she proceeded. Then she shut them out, and returned to the ninth, who, however, refused to be consoled because of the interruption to its meal, and yelled louder.

The mother of nine walked the floor with it till it was quiet, and while she walked Daysey Mayme's answer to the eternal question proceeded with interruptions like these:

It Was Like This

"——another man, and (If it's the ice man tell him to come tomorrow. I haven't the change) so I broke the engage"——(There, look at the way you've torn your pants. I'll have to sit up all night to mend them!——none such, and then there was Will"——(Dirt can't exhibit, what is it screaming for now?——"Darley, but"——(No, I can't give you a cent for candy. It is all I can do to get money out of your father for necessities without such foolishness!——etc., etc., for two hours, when Daysey Mayme left, with her story still untold.

"How does it happen you have never married?" remains a question she has never answered.

"In the Back of His Watch"

Copyright, 1912, National News Association.

By Nell Brinkley

Do you know that man (bless his heart) who, the second time you've met him at dinner, digs from his watch pocket or his breast, with a face alight, a little picture of a woman and a baby or two and says, "There they are! It isn't a good picture of them. I've a better one at home!"

A Matter of Personal Pride

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE success of any public reform depends upon the enthusiasm of the individual.

A plan is prepared for bettering public conditions. Committees are appointed, city officials assume certain responsibility, certain days are set aside for putting the reform into effect, and with a whoop and a hurrah, and perhaps a band or two, that being the manner in which men call attention to their efforts, the work is begun.

If it is a success or a failure depends not on the committee, the civic officials with assbes, or those who whoop and hurrah. That depends on the private individual!

And in ninety-nine reforms in every hundred, that "private individual" is a woman!

She is not on any committee. Her existence is not recognized by the men fostering the reform. They do not think of her as having any connection with the success or failure of their plans. But, nevertheless, without her co-operation their most widely proclaimed, their most loudly heralded, reforms are a failure.

This is particularly true in the commendable attempts made to establish clean-up days for a city, the same as there are clean-up days in the home.

Certain days are set aside for collecting and destroying all the refuse found in streets and vacant lots. In some towns there are tin can days, fly days, weed days, etc., with an effort to rid the city, with prizes offered for the individual doing the greatest amount of work.

Permanent Advance

The result of such campaign work doesn't end with a city made more beautiful; sanitary conditions are improved, and a pace has been set that means the city will never entirely relapse into former unsightly and unhealthful conditions. Backsliding is bound to follow, but the city will never slide back to the point from which it made its first advance on the first clean-up day.

The mother of the home in whose busy hands there has been laid this responsibility is not the only woman who can help in this important work.

The daughter of the home is equally responsible, and I make this statement in the face of a protest that many of them leave their homes at an early hour in the morning and work behind counters downtown all day.

They Can Help

They haven't the time, I know, to personally engage in clean-up work. They bolt their breakfasts in the morning and rush off to a hard day's work, and are tired beyond all clean-up campaign enthusiasm when they return at night.

Many of them find time to assist overburdened mothers in the care of a house, and if any spare time is left it has so many calls made upon it that the charge that these girls must also help in a public campaign seems ridiculous.

Make every plan for public good a matter of private concern and individual enthusiasm. Without such assistance, no public reforms will succeed.

She Came Provided

IT was a hidden spot on the seashore. The waves lapped contentedly, the sun shone sweetly, and everything was quiet and peaceful.

The yard of sandy space between them had dwindled to two feet, to one foot, to nothing.

They watched the seagulls circling round the white cliffs, and she told him that her name was Edith.

"Edith's a sweet name!" he declared.

"How can you mean flatter!" she murmured. He edged still nearer. His arm was in the vicinity of her girdle zone.

"Tire," she said, as she fished a pair of men's gloves from her vanity bag and gazed at her white palms with relief. "If you're goin' to be friendly, you'd better wear these! My boy's a policeman, and he's a nut on fingerprints!"

Cured Anyway

"Did you see my picture in this morning's paper?" asked the gentleman with political aspirations.

"Yes," said the wit, shrieking with laughter. "What were you cured of? Ha, ha!"

"O vanity—after I saw the picture!" answered the other sadly.

Took His Ticket

FOR quite a long time Algernon had been wondering how to escape from the tall girl who gently drooped upon him. The soft converse and witching eyes of the fair Amelie were gripping tighter, and he longed to break the spell before 'twas too late.

As the lady closed a spirited description of her summer holidays at an obscure Northern seaside resort, she remarked impulsively:

"Oh, Mr. Stopface, I'm sure you ought to go there! You can travel so comfortably, and it's a gem of a place!"

Algy looked rigidly at her, rose slowly, and eagerly seized his hat.

"No man shall say that twice to me," he remarked impressively. "I knew it was after 11 o'clock, but I thought it—still, no matter. Fare-well, Miss Flimsy-lub! I'll take your advice. I'll go at once!"

And, lo and behold, he did!

No. 62—Helen's Search for a Furnished Apartment in London Is Most Discouraging

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

IT was a charming room with low bookcases, Persian rugs and hangings. Everywhere were evidences of foreign travel. Bits of rare pottery and jade, curious daggers and swords were strewn over the bookcases, tables and desk.

"Surely they wouldn't rent the apartment like this?" exclaimed Helen. "They'd put away some of these things!"

"No, ma'am; it's to be rented just as it is," and the caretaker crossed over to raise the blinds. "It belongs to Colonel Mawson—he's gone to India."

"But you don't think it could be had for less than three months?"

"I'm afraid not, ma'am. But you can see the agents—Edgcomb & Wickham, No. 142 Oxford street.

Helen made a note of the address and then stepped again to the door of the bedroom. There was a canopied bed hung with heavy silk curtains and the walls were covered with rare old prints and engravings.

To Helen it looked like the stage setting of an English play. She could picture Colonel Mawson coming in, throwing himself into one of the curiously carved chairs while a Japanese valet took off his boots and brought him a whiskey and soda.

Half an hour later Helen found herself in the office of Edgcomb & Wickham, "House Agents." After a few minutes' wait in the outer office she was ushered in to Mr. Wickham. He was the typical frock-coated, deliberate English business man.

It was evidently a pleasant break in the monotony of his day to have a charming young American rush in and declare with her quick, impulsive enthusiasm that she had just seen the most "ideal" apartment, which was just what she wanted, but the caretaker had said it must be rented for three months, and she wanted it for only one.

When Helen paused, breathless, he smilingly asked what apartment it was. Eagerly she gave the address.

A Disappointment

"That's Colonel Mawson's apartment—no, I'm afraid it would be impossible to let that for less than three months. If he were here himself, it is very probable he would make an exception in this case," implying that so charming an applicant could not be refused. "But we're no choice in the matter. And you can understand, I'm sure, why he would not wish to rent a place of that kind for only a month."

She had, of course, understood that all along, but with the egotism of her femininity she had hoped to overrule that restriction.

Helen was always inclined to feel that all rules and regulations should be adjusted to suit her convenience. She was never aggressive or assertive about it, and yet she was often sweetly unreasonable. She could never see why she should not be made an exception.

"But we've another two-room apartment on Great Portland street that might interest you. It's just around the corner from here. If you wish I'll go over there with you now."

To find herself walking along Oxford street with an estate agent in a frock coat and high hat was to Helen a somewhat novel sensation.

Her feminine intuition told her that Mr. Wickham's excessive courtesy was due not to his desire to rent the apartment but to his very evident interest in her.

It is an exceptional woman who does not take pleasure in the knowledge that she has aroused admiration and interest—and Helen was not an exceptional woman.

It was an old-fashioned brick house with an air of faded elegance. A liveried servant opened the door and showed them the rooms.

To Helen's surprise it was the drawing room and the room back of it, fitted as a bed room, that was to let. The huge rooms and high ceilings gave such an atmosphere of grandeur that she was astonished when Mr. Wickham mentioned the price—only three pounds a week.

"And where is the bath?" she asked gazing around for a door that might lead into one.

"On the third floor, madame," answered the servant.

"I'm afraid you'll find that rather hard to get in London," ventured Mr. Wickham. "Colonel Mawson was very exceptional. But if you like these rooms—after all, the bath is a small matter."

Helen laughed. "I'm afraid we Americans don't think so. I'd rather have a ball room and my own bath than all this luxury without one."

Then feeling she had been rude, she added hastily:

"But I suppose we're spoiled. You know we've so many new hotels and apartments with a bath for almost every room, that we've come to think them a necessity."

Outside, Mr. Wickham insisted on Helen coming back to the office that he might give her the addresses of several other apartments.

"Some of those will answer, if you will write or telephone me tomorrow, I may have something else."

Hard to Find

There were four places on the list, and three were among the newspaper advertisements, which Warren had marked that morning.

Helen went to them all, but there was some objection to each one. Besides she had set her heart on Colonel Mawson's apartment, and with the picture of that in her mind, nothing else seemed desirable.

Half past five found her back at the hotel, warm, tired and discouraged.

It was only a few moments until Warren came.

"Well, what luck?" as he threw himself heavily in a chair. "Jove, I'm tired. Where'd you find?"

"Oh, dear, I found the most wonderful place—an army officer's apartment. He's gone to India and left it full of the most interesting things that he's collected all over the world. And, oh, the most beautiful rugs—and old prints!"

"Sounds pretty good. How much?"

"Only four and a half guineas a week. And there's a caretaker on the place to serve breakfast—oh, it's ideal."

"Good! When did you take it from—tomorrow? We want to get out of this joint."

"I couldn't get it—that's the trouble. They wouldn't rent it for less than three months."

"On the third floor, madame," answered the servant.

"I'm afraid you'll find that rather hard to get in London," ventured Mr. Wickham. "Colonel Mawson was very exceptional. But if you like these rooms—after all, the bath is a small matter."

"But I wanted that so much! I saw a lot of other places, but they couldn't compare with it."

"By George, if that isn't like a woman—harping on something she can't get. What are the other places like?"

"Well, there was one on Great Portland street. The agent took me to that. Dear, what do you think? I met the nicest man—Mr. Wickham, of Edgcomb & Wickham, house agents.' And he took me himself to look at an apartment. Wasn't that most unusual?"

"Huh! What about the place?"

"Well, there were two very nice large rooms on the first floor—but the bath was on the third. That's what I found everywhere. It's almost impossible to get a bath on the first floor—all those private apartments."

"Some of those will answer. If you will write or telephone me tomorrow, I may have something else."

"Well, couldn't they put in a double bed—or another single one?"

"No, I looked them, but they hadn't any. You see it was an apartment that was being let just as it was. But the janitor said I could rent a bed at any furniture store. Did you ever hear of such a thing?"

"Oh, yes, they do that here. You can rent any kind of furniture for as long as you want. But we won't bother with that. What else did you find?"

"Nothing with a private bath. Dear, I almost think we should stay here. I don't believe we can do any better."

"Well, we WILL do better. If you can't find a place—I CAN. Might have known you'd fizzle out."

"But, dear, I tried so hard," tremulously. "I went till I was ready to drop—didn't even stop for lunch. But I had to wait so long every place—they're so slow and deliberate." You know you said yourself you couldn't do business fast over here."

"That's different—I can get an apartment fast enough. Here it's only a quarter of six now—I'll have time to go to a couple of places before dinner. Want to come along?"

Helen was pitifully tired. Her feet ached, her back ached and she could have cried at the thought of starting out again.

"Well, for heaven's sake, don't come if you don't want to," contemptuously, nothing her hesitation. "If you're that tired, you'd better stay here. Have your dinner sent up, and I'll bum around and get mine wherever I happen to be."

"But the dread of spending the evening in that hotel room alone sent Helen to her feet with a hurried——

"Oh, no, no, dear—I'm not tired. I want to go—I'd love to! Wait, I'll be ready in just a moment."

"Hurry up, then. I'm going to find that apartment tonight." Warren strode out into the hall, swinging his cane with an energy and vigor that suggested a determination to walk miles.

And Helen, trying to force back all signs of weariness lest he be irritated, gathered up her gloves and handbag and hurried meekly after him.

APPROVED AIDS TO HEALTH AND BEAUTY

VALUABLE HAIR-TONIC—A really excellent hair and scalp-tonic can be made at home by simply mixing together 1 ounce quinzoin and ½ pint each alcohol and water. The result is soothing to tender, itchy scalps, and its continued use will check dandruff as well as induces an abundance of thick, glossy hair. Quinzoin is obtainable at any druggist's.

TO REMOVE HAIR OR FUZZ—With a little water, mix enough powdered delatone to form a paste. Spread on hairy surface, then after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have vanished. Never use more than delatone and one application usually is all that is required.

FOR PIMPLES AND SALLOWNESS—Impure blood is frequently indicated by pimples, blotches or a "muddy" complexion. An old-fashioned sarsaparilla tonic is splendid to rid the system of these poisons, and to make it, put 1 ounce sarsaparilla in ½ pint of alcohol, then add 1 dram (¼ cupful) sugar and enough hot water to make a pint. Taking a tablespoonful three times a day usually clears the blood of its impurities, builds up worn, waste tissues and fortifies the system against disease. A simple remedy, but fine to use during hot weather, and will give to the skin a clearness and healthful unobtainable any other way.

OIL SOOTHE—An excellent remedy—Dissolve 1 ounce cystos in a pint cold, clear water and you will have the finest kind of eye-tonic. Putting 2 or 3 drops in the eyes is wonderfully refreshing and soothes aching muscles. This cystos eye-tonic is also unequaled to remove foreign particles and for granulated lids. It gives brightness to the eyes, a youthful sparkle and expression to the dullest orbs.

WHEN THE SKIN FRECKLES—Rubbing a little almond cream-jelly on the skin will remove freckles, tan and other blemishes. To prepare this cream-jelly, pour 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine into ¼ pint water, then add 1 ounce almond-jell. Let stand over night before using. This cream-jelly is excellent for removing lines and rounding out hollows, and a few applications will banish surface pimples, skin-roughness and that sallow, oily look.

PART 3.—(Continued.)

"THEY are the same she is wearing now," the anxious mother assured him. "Wait, and I will get them for you."

"No need. Let her hold out her hand in token of amity. I shall soon see."

They returned to where the girl sat, wrapped in her cloak, sobbing still, but not so violently.

"Caroline, you may take off your things," said the mother, drawing the pins from her own hat. "We shall not go today."

The child shot her mother one disappointed look, then proceeded to follow suit. When her hat was off, she began to take off her gloves. As soon as they were on the table, the mother passed them over to Mr. Gryce. As he looked at them, the girl lifted off her cloak.

"Will—will he tell?" she whispered behind its ample folds into her mother's ear.

The answer came quickly, but not in the mother's tones. Mr. Gryce's ears had lost none of their ancient acuteness.

"I do not see that I should gain much by doing so. The one discovery which would link this bud of yours indissolubly with Miss Challoner's death, I have failed to make. If I am equally unsuccessful below—if I can establish no closer connection there than here between this cutter and the weapon which killed Miss Challoner, I shall have no cause to mention the matter. It will be too extraneous to the cause. Do you remember the exact spot where you stopped, Miss Watkins?"

"No, no. Somewhere near those big chairs; I didn't have to step out of my way; I really didn't."

Mr. Gryce's answering smile was a study. It seemed to convey a two-fold message, one for the mother and one for the child, and both were comforting. But he went away disappointed. The crew which promised so much was, to all appearance, a false one.

He could soon tell.

Integrity.

MR. GRYCE'S tears were only too well founded. Though Mr. Elroy was kind enough to point out the exact spot where he saw Miss Watkins stoop, no trace of blood was found upon the rug which had lain there, nor had anything of the kind been overlooked by the very careful man who scrubbed the lobby floor in the early morning. This was disappointing, as its presence would have settled the whole question. When these efforts all exhausted, the two detectives fixed each other again in the small room given up to their use. Mr. Gryce showed his discouragement. To be certain of a fact you cannot prove has not the same alluring quality for the old that it has for the young. Sweetwater watched him in some concern, then, with the persistence which was one of his strong points, ventured finally to remark:

"I have lost one idea left on the sailfloor."

"And what is that?" cried he, as he was, Mr. Gryce was alert in a moment.

"The girl wore a red cloak. If I mistake not, the lining was also red. A spot on it might not show to the casual observer. Yet it would seem useful to us."

"Sweetwater!"

A faint blush rose to the old man's cheek.

"Shall I request the privilege of looking that garment over?"

"Yes."

The young fellow ducked and left the room. When he returned, it was with a downcast air.

"Nothing doing," said he.

And then there was silence.

"We only need to find out now that this cutter was not every Miss Challoner's property," remarked Mr. Gryce, at last, with a gesture toward the object mapped lying openly on the table before him.

"That should be easy. Shall I take it to their rooms and show it to her maid?"

"If you can do so without disturbing the old gentleman."

But here they were themselves disturbed. A knock at the door was followed by the immediate entrance of the very person just mentioned. Mr. Challoner had come in search of the Inspector, and showed some surprise to find his place occupied by an unknown man.

But Mr. Gryce, who discerned things in the perceived father's face, was all alacrity in an instant. Greeting his visitor with a smile which few could see without trusting the man, he explained the Inspector's absence and introduced himself in his own capacity.

Mr. Challoner had heard of him. Nevertheless, he did not seem inclined to speak.

Mr. Gryce motioned Sweetwater from the room. With a warm look the young detective withdrew, his last glance cast at the cutter still lying in full view on the table.

The Paper Cutter

Mr. Gryce, not unmindful himself of this object, took it up, then laid it down again, with an air of seeming abstraction.

The father's attention was caught.

"What is that?" he cried, advancing a step and bestowing more than an ordinary glance at the object thus brought casually, as it were, to his notice. "I surely recognize this cutter. Does it belong here or—"

Mr. Gryce, observing the other's emotion, motioned him to a chair. As his visitor sank into it, he remarked, with all the consideration exacted by the situation:

"It is unknown property, Mr. Challoner. But we have some reason to think it belonged to your daughter. Are we correct in this surmise?"

"I have seen it, or one like it, often in her hand." Here his eyes suddenly dilated and the hand stretched forth to grasp it quickly drew back. "Where, where was it found?" he hoarsely demanded. "O God! am I to be crushed to the very earth by sorrow?"

Mr. Gryce hastened to give him such relief as was consistent with the truth.

"It was picked up—last night—from the lobby floor. There is seemingly nothing to connect it with her death. Yet"—

The pause was eloquent. Mr. Challoner gave the detective an appalled look and turned white to the lips. Then, gradually, as the silence continued, his head fell forward, and he muttered almost unintelligibly:

"I honestly believe her the victim of some heartless stranger. I do now; but, but I cannot subdue the police. At any cost I must protect a sentiment I made under false impressions and with no desire to deceive. I said that I knew all of the gentlemen who admired her and aspired to her hand, and that they were all reputable and above committing additional pangs of seeing her inmost concerns—the secret and holiest recesses of a woman's heart, laid open to the public. For, from the tenor of most of these letters, she—she was not averse to the writer."

Mr. Gryce moved a little restlessly in his chair and stared hard at the cutter so conveniently placed under his eye. Then his manner softened and he remarked:

"We will do what we can. But you must understand that the matter is not a simple one. That, in fact, it contains mysteries which demand police investigation. We do not dare to trifle with any of the facts. The inspector, and, if not he, the coroner, will have to be told about these letters and will probably ask to see them."

They are the letters of a gentleman."

"With the one exception."

A Father's Faith

"Yes, that is understood." Then in a sudden heat and with an almost sublime trust in his daughter notwithstanding the duplicity he had just discovered: "Nothing—not the story told by these letters, or the sight of that stupidly papercutter with its foolish and very public blade, will make me believe that she willingly took her own life. You do not know, cannot know, the fine delicacy of her nature. She was a lady through and through. If she had meditated death—if the breach suggested by the fine letter I have mentioned, should have so preyed upon her spirits as to lead her to break her old father's heart and outrage the feelings of all who knew her, she could not, being the woman she was, choose a public place for such an act—an hotel writing room—in face of a lobby full of hurrying men. It was out of nature. Every one who knows her will tell you so. The deed was an accident—incredible—but still an accident."

Mr. Gryce had respect for this outburst. Making no attempt to answer it, he suggested, with some hesitation, that Miss Challoner had been seen writing a letter previous to taking those fatal steps from the desk which ended so tragically. Was this letter to one of her lady friends, as reported, and was it as far from suggesting the awful tragedy which followed, as he had been told?

"It was a graceful letter. Such a one as she often wrote to her little proteges here and there. I judge that this was written to some girl like that, for the person addressed was not known to her maid, any more than she was to me. It expressed an affectionate interest, and in its closing sentences a most kindly encouragement; and she meditating her own death at the moment! Impossible! That letter should exonerate her if nothing else does."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

His eyes suddenly dilated. "Where was it found?" he hoarsely demanded.

The airplane, making a twelve-hour journey from London to Hong Kong, has got the difficulties ahead of it. Something apparently was wrong with the engine, for the customary speed of the airship had suddenly and considerably slackened.

"Why, sir," replied the engineer, "we're passin' through the Milky Way, an' the propeller's full o' butter."

The Love Age

By Dorothy Dix

A MAN wants to know what is the love age in women, and whether a girl of sixteen is capable of entertaining a deep and unchanging affection.

This is a hard question to answer, for the love age in women depends to a great degree on race and climatic conditions. In the tropics, where women mature early and age early, they also love early, but among people of a colder clime and blood sentiment is the flower of a late Spring.

Certainly in this latitude we should not take any fourteen-year-old Juliet seriously, and any sensible mama who caught her daughter of that age hanging over the banisters whispering down sizzling love speeches to some moon-struck Romeo would turn the forward little minx across her knee and give her a good spanking. That would be about the sort of love philandering that she would get, and ninety-nine times out of a hundred it would work a complete and lasting cure.

Of course, every girl of sixteen believes herself capable of the grand passion, just as she believes herself capable of singing in grand opera, or elevating the stage, or, as one young miss naively told me the other day she intended to do, of writing a great novel that would change the nature of and uplift every human being that read it. But, in reality, she is as little capable of doing the one as the other.

Possibly she may have within her a great voice, or a great talent, or a great ability to love, but it is embryonic, undeveloped, a promise and not a finished performance.

An Unknown Territory

To a girl sixteen her mind and heart are as unknown a territory to her as Darkest Africa. She has not yet taken the measure of her own needs or her own potentialities. She has no idea of what she will demand of a man. She is utterly, totally ignorant of herself and of life, and the curse of her ignorance is that she does not know that she doesn't know, but believes herself to be all wise.

She plays with love as with a new and delightful toy, not knowing that it is a thing that older people approach with fear and trembling. She is enchanted with new emotions, with the gratified vanity of being flattered and made love to, and she is so facile in imagination that she can throw the rosy mantle of romance that she has woven over anything in trousers that pass court to her.

This is why very young girls elope with their fathers' chauffeurs or marry their drys-a-dust music masters, or consult some order fully on the name of Jones before they have found out what love really is.

But whether the man that a girl falls in love with when she is sixteen will continue to fire her fancy when she is twenty-two or twenty-three is just as much an uncertainty as whether she will continue to love a passion for straw-berry jam and chewing gum after she gets out of the school room. There are some women who never get beyond the bread and butter stage of existence, but most women do, and there is nothing to which those who have developed a taste for earlier food look back with such many-sided and shuddering horror as to the man with whom they fancied themselves in love when they were sixteen.

Certainly the man who marries the girl of sixteen takes a long shot at happiness, for he has to take chances on her changing ideals as she grows from childhood to womanhood, and not many of us are lucky enough to remain ideals with those with whom one daily associate.

The Love Age

I should say that from twenty-five to thirty was the real love time of a woman's life, the age at which one could be most sure that when she loved she loved for keeps. By that time she has come to herself. Her tastes are formed, her character is established, and she knows what qualities she requires in a mate.

She is still young enough to have her dreams unburdened, and to believe in the high gods of romance. Her enthusiasms are still at high tide, so that she can give without counting the cost, but her heart is no longer a wethercock to be blown about by every wind of fancy. It is the full blown rose and not the bud of love that she gives a man, and lucky is he on whom it is bestowed.

The girl at sixteen gets over an unfortunate love affair as easily as she does a disappointment about going to a ball, but the woman of twenty-five or thirty who loves deeply and truly never loves again, and if any untoward thing happens to blight her affections she goes sorrowing and widowed in soul to the grave.

Occasionally there is a woman who at thirty-five is capable of a great and splendid love, but for the most part the love springs have dried up in the heart of her who has reached this age. Love thrives best in an atmosphere of illusion, and the woman of thirty-five has seen too much of life, and too much of the sordid reality of her friends' romances. She has heard John, who raved over Kitty before they were married, raving over the household bills after they were married. She has heard the voice once tuned in quoting poetry to Sally now employed solely in knocking Sally's faults and weaknesses.

Less Faith in Thirty-five

It is hard to believe in the continuance of love as we see it exemplified in the matrimonial experiences with our friends, and as we grow older we cease to believe that special miracles will be worked in one behalf, and so the woman of thirty-five has little of enthusiasm and less of faith to give to any man, and she is apt to regard a suitor more from the eligible than the sentimental point of view.

After fifty a woman is past the love age. She is capable only of friendship, but this may be of a character so true and loyal, so fine and disinterested, so faithful and so satisfying, that it is more than a substitute for love. It may lack some of the thrills of youth and love, but it is full of a peace that passes all understanding, and blessed is the man who is fortunate enough to get it.

He Wouldn't Break

"I wish I had a baby brother mamma," said four-year-old Maggie.

"Why, dear, what do you want one for?"

"I want him to wheel in my perambulator."

"But you have several dolls."

"Yes; but they are always getting broken when the perambulator tips over."

Coppers Selling Higher But the Demand Is Light

By W. H. ROSS.

W. H. ROSS

STATE STREET, July 31.—Midday—The volume of trading continued light in the Boston market this morning, but the tone was firmer at the opening, particularly as regards copper issues. The metal market in London started stronger. Among those to advance were Butte & Superior, Amalgamated, Tuolumne, Calumet & Arizona and Superior, the latter making the most gain. Lake, Shannon, Granby and Chino sold lower.

The statement of the Superior earnings for the first six months of the year shows profits of $1.27 a share.

There was a better tone in the New York and London markets in early trading today.

New York Opens Higher.

Prices ranged fractionally higher at the opening of the New York market and there was an improvement in sentiment attributed to the Steel Corporation's earnings report for the second quarter. Steel common led the initial rise. Canadian Pacific moved up 2 points on the strength of its earnings report. Early gains for prominent stocks ranged from ⅛ to ⅝. After the first few minutes of trading some issues showed further advances, while others were slightly lower than opening quotations. Steel common, Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, Great Northern preferred and a few others went off from ⅛ to ¾, while small advances were shown in Baltimore & Ohio, Northern Pacific, Consolidated Gas and Rubber common. American Tobacco rose 2 points and Norfolk & Western ⅜. Later Canadian Pacific reacted ⅜.

The Curb opened steady.

American stocks were firm in London, where Steel issues advanced on large transactions, and Canadian Pacific was buoyant.

Copper Metal Speculation.

Speculation in the copper metal market in London continues and the trend of prices is still satisfactory to the bear element. The reason for declines is unknown, if there is any, as nothing in the known situation warrants it.

At the London opening today spot was up 6s. 3d. and futures 10s.

Manufacturers in this country who use copper are chary about placing orders now because of the uncertainty of the London warrants market. The wide fluctuations are not easily explained, but they are undoubtedly inspiring caution on the part of consumers. It is said that small dealers have recently sold a little copper under 17⅜ cents. Big agencies stand pat for 17⅝ cents a pound. It is said that practically all August copper has been sold and that business for September and October delivery has been heavy. It is predicted in selling quarters that after the July figures of the Copper Producers' Association are published, the London market will grow strong. Much of the selling there is attributed to short account.

Record tonnage figures for July are expected from the Utah Copper, Ray Consolidated and Chino companies, and D. C. Jackling says it should be the greatest month in the history of porphyry copper properties.

Beef Trust Dissolution Plan.

According to a Chicago dispatch the plan for the dissolution of the National Packing Company, which is supposed to have been approved of by the Department of Justice, awards forty-six per cent. of the property, variously estimated at ranging from $80,000,000 to $150,000,000 in value, to Swift & Co., forty per cent. to Armour & Co., and fourteen per cent. to Morris & Co. The Armours will get the Chicago plant of the Anglo-American Provision Company, the Stock Yards Warehouse Company, the Fowler Packing Company of Kansas City and the New York Butchers' Dressed Beef Company, while plants to be taken by the Swifts are the Continental Packing Company of Chicago, the G. H. Hammond Company, and the Chicago plant of Omaha Packing Company. Morris interests will get the South Omaha plant of the Omaha Packing Company and the old plant of that company. It is said that more than 200 branch houses and agencies are included in the distribution on the percentage basis.

Cotton Prices Decline.

The New York cotton market opened with August seventeen points lower and the other months from two to five points off. The decline in the new crop positions did not fully reflect the setback in cables. The bullish character of reports from Texas soon caused a renewal of support which steadied the new crop options to a shade above yesterday's close. There was heavy buying by brokers representing spot houses and Wall Street interests. Futures were quiet and steady in Liverpool with spot prices easier. The market there rallied four points after the opening here.

Financial News in Brief.

For the fiscal year ending June 30 the Canadian Pacific's gross revenues increased about $19,000,000 and the net $6,000,000. This road is a great factor in the settlement of Canada and never has to complain of any oppression on the part of the Dominion government. It is very popular with the people of the country its lines traverse, and popularity would be a great asset for any American railroad.

When J. Pierpont Morgan attended the Steel Corporation meeting yesterday it was his first appearance in the vicinity of Wall street for months. When he paused on the steps of No. 71 Broadway to chat with several other Steel directors, a crowd at once collected. There are few men living who can cause the collection of a Wall street crowd through either respect, awe or curiosity. Of his appearance it is said: "He walked with the swagger of a man at least fifteen years under seventy-three."

Transactions on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday made the smallest total recorded since July 14, 1911.

If present conditions continue, it is believed that the United States Steel Corporation will be able to show at the end of the year enough net earnings to cover all dividend requirements.

"Black rust" is of small consequence as a crop bugaboo in the minds of Northwestern farmers compared with the fear that they will not be able to get enough binder twine. One of the chiefs of the twine industry says there will be a shortage of 5,000,000 pounds in that section.

On the same day that public attention was called to the fact that Standard Oil of Kansas annual earnings are estimated at 100 per cent. on capitalization the stock jumped eighty points. On the same day, too, Standard Oil of California stockholders were considering the proposition to increase the capital from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000. Standard Oil "melons" are the biggest ever grown.

The Steel Corporation has been forced to decline many big orders because it could not deliver products at required times, even though high premiums were offered. It is said that the unfilled tonnage statement for this month will show little change in total from that for June.

One Eastern shipyard has ordered 25,000 tons of steel shapes and plates, and several others have made inquiries for a large tonnage. The Panama Canal will boom shipbuilding.

The total of car inquiries yesterday was about 5,400. The Canadian Pacific may order from 1,000 to 3,000 for freight, and the Lehigh Valley is after 1,000. Other inquiries totalled 1,400.

The General Electric Company has ordered forty electric locomotives from the American Locomotive Company and they will be used on the Panama Canal.

In fighting Interstate Commerce Commission jurisdiction over pipe lines, Standard Oil will present to the United States Supreme Court questions that tribunal has never had to pass upon. Standard Oil claims that its pipe lines traverse "private" rights of way and cannot be taken for public use except through due process of law.

Figuring Marconi shares at a market value of $8.25 a share, the reorganization committee of the United Wireless Telegraph Company estimates that each share of the latter has a value of $4. The committee has notified holders of certificates of deposit of the old company's stock that that of the new Wireless Liquidating Company is ready for distribution at the rate of one share of new for two of old.

The editor of the London Statist cables Hearst newspapers that the Bank of England has complete control of the outside market, and that, despite rumors, is not likely to put up the bank rate.

That Democrats in Congress have little hope of any tariff legislation this session was shown when the House returned to the Senate without approval and without request for a conference the wool, the sugar and the excise bills.

Regarding Bethlehem Steel Corporation earnings it is stated that those available for dividends during the first six months of this year were at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on common stock after allowing for 7 per cent. upon preferred.

The American Iron & Steel Company has advanced the price of bar iron $1 a ton and other producers will follow this lead. The Republic Iron & Steel Company has raised its price $1 a ton for plates and shapes.

DR. ELIOT TALKS ON EQUAL IMMIGRATION

HONOLULU, July 31.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, discussing the study of the influx of foreign peoples into the United States, said: "If men immigrate, the women of their race should come too." He advocated laws which would prevent the preponderance of more than five per cent. of men over women entering the country. Moral stamina and racial purity he said would be safeguarded. Dr. Eliot sailed for San Francisco on the China.

Best Interior Player-Piano
—THE—Autopiano

The Autopiano unites in a single instrument a high-class upright, which can be played with the hands (the old way), and the player-piano, which is played with the perforated music roll (the new way), thus enabling anyone, young or old, to render in a finished manner any musical composition. The construction of the Autopiano is most durable, and, unlike others, who use rubber tubes in construction—in the Autopiano lead tubes are used and are indestructible. Its sweet tone is unequalled.

THE PRE-EMINENCE OF THE AUTOPIANO AT THE VATICAN is confirmed by the recent bestowal of the ORDER OF ST. SYLVESTER
—by—

HIS HOLINESS POPE PIUS X

Upon Mr. Charles Kohler as founder of the Autopiano Company. The order of St. Sylvester is one of the three highest orders of Papal Knighthood that may be conferred upon laymen. In conferring the order the decree states that His Holiness bestows this special honor and dignity in recognition of the splendid ingenuity and skill displayed in producing a player-piano of such qualities as the Autopiano. Following, as this does, the gold medal awards of His Holiness to the Autopiano Company in 1908, the position of pre-eminence that THE AUTOPIANO occupies in the Vatican is unmistakable.

A great many people have in their homes what is practically a "Dead piano." No one knows how to play it—son and daughter who used to play and entertain the family have married and the piano is now merely an expensive ornament. Now is the time to get an Autopiano—put in the music roll, start it—that's all you have to do.

Will play for you (without any knowledge of music or playing on your part) the world's greatest music, new and old. All opera and popular music prepared for the Autopiano as soon as published.

WE WILL TAKE YOUR PIANO IN EXCHANGE AND ALLOW YOU FULL VALUE

The Democratic House Caucus Imperils Democratic Success in 1912

The Democratic House majority of the Sixty-second Congress won golden opinions from the country. It passed with prompt vigor and decision a series of wholesome measures near to the heart of the people, and advanced the cause of Democracy far to the front for 1912.

But the Democratic House majority, in caucus majority, stabbing the navy to inferiority, and weakening the international status of the Republic, has evoked the condemnation of the people, and, in its hands, the last two months have done as much to injure the prospects of Democratic success as the earlier months did to advance Democracy's cause.

There's yet time to redeem the picayunish, parsimonious and unpatriotic record.

It is simply a question of Democratic intelligence and Democratic loyalty.

If it is true, as alleged and never denied, that the two battleship programme was killed in the Democratic House by certain Democratic Congressmen in retaliation for the failure to secure certain little postoffices or public buildings in their districts, then the action of these Congressmen is shamefully little and unpatriotic, and should bring down upon these little Congressmen the indignant rebuke of their larger-minded colleagues, as it has evoked the indignation of the country.

A Democratic Congressman who would vote to weaken his country's defense and degrade his country's status because he could not secure a new postoffice building for some minor town in his district is not worthy to represent a Democratic constituency in the National Congress, and should be retired to make room for a better American—as he doubtless will be.

If there are Congressmen on the Democratic side who honestly oppose the two battleships because they wish the party to go before the country with a record of great economy in public expenditure, they are fighting progress and safety and public opinion and their own party platform, and are degrading a great rich republic into a miserable miserly policy of stinginess in the richest and most essential investment that a republic can make in peace and honor and national safety.

Under the stress and leading of the circumstances, the vigorous and honest thing for an American Congress to do is to ignore a caucus that has ignored the party platform and to vote for country above party as the party's freshest representatives have urged them to do.

If the new called Democratic caucus does not vote to sustain the Senate and the National Democratic platform in support of two battleships, then no honest American Congressman should be bound to support a caucus that insults the platform and the sentiment of his party.

Sulzer and Lee and Curley and Oscar Underwood are right. Every honest Democrat in Congress can safely follow them.

In this vital matter of the navy the Republican minority in Congress is gloriously American and right. In the same matter the Democratic majority is ingloriously un-American and wrong.

The Democrats of parsimony in the "pork barrel" may go too far in thinking that the Democrats will win in November in despite of their attitude against the navy. In the hands of a consummate political campaigner like Roosevelt, this little stingy, un-American attitude may become, and will become, a tremendous issue.

It is three months yet before the November ballot.

Many a political revolution has been wrought and won in less time than that.

An un-American policy is a frightful handicap under which to enter a Presidential campaign.

Japan has a new ruler. He must do something to render his reign illustrious. England and Germany are restless and aggressive in territorial opposition to the Monroe Doctrine.

It is a sorry time for America to batter down its chief international defenses and to invite aggression by shameful weakness.

If the Democratic House caucus forces the Democratic party to go before the country upon this basis, then the Democratic House caucus must be responsible for the national protest of November.

Teach Your Eyes to See

Advice for Would-Be Reporters and All Others.

Copyright, 1912, by American Journal Examiner

An ingenuous young man writes the following touching note:

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I am a boy fifteen years old. I should like to enter Journalism and as soon as possible become one of the great editors of the world. Please tell me how I may achieve this.

We cannot give an absolute recipe for becoming one of the greatest editors of the world. If we possessed such a recipe we should long since have applied it in our own interest. But looking back over long years, remembering a few successes and many scores of failures among men who have tried to be editors, we feel like giving and emphasizing to the fullest extent this piece of advice:

LEARN TO SEE.

What the world demands of a newspaper man, of any writer, is that he shall tell things exactly as they are. To tell things as they are he must learn to see them, and learning to see is the most difficult task in the world.

Ruskin says:

"Hundreds of people can talk for one who can think; but thousands can think for one who can see.

"To see clearly is poetry, prophecy and religion all in one."

Again he says:

"The greatest thing a human soul ever does in this world is to see something and tell what it saw in a plain way."

"AND I SAW," thus reads the convincing, inspired statement of one of the divine reporters.

Get all the knowledge you can, read, write, revise, question the wise man, listen to the foolish.

BUT ABOVE ALL LEARN TO SEE.

Knowing how to see may not make you a great editor, but it will make you more competent and more successful in any line of endeavor that may attract you.

Dr. Parkhurst's Article

—ON—

Americans Lacking in Respect for Things of an Earlier Day

Written for the American by Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

WE Americans are lacking in respect for old things.

Perhaps it is because we are a new people, and, therefore, possessed of a lively consciousness of the future.

It is not necessary to worship the past, but we should be safer if we had a warmer appreciation of historic values.

It is a symptom of the times that children govern their parents.

Family government continues, but is vested in the offspring.

Men today are believers in the new theology, the new morality, the new nationalism, the new thought. Progressivelsm has become a kind of mania. The old is discarded because it is old, not because it is outworn. Distinction should be made between different kinds of conservatism.

There Is on the One Hand the Conservatism of Dry Rot

There is, on the one hand, the conservatism of dry rot, but there is also a live conservatism, one which cherishes what has been at the same time that it is reaching carefully forward to what is going to be—something as a mountain climber keeps one foot firmly placed on the rock which he has reached, at the same moment that he is getting ready to put his other foot on the rock above.

Whether we realize it or not, in all our building we construct on the basis of the past. We are heirs of the previous centuries. Most of what we know; very nearly all of what we know, is what has been thought out by our ancestors going clear back to the beginning of history. If we can see farther than they, it is only because we stand on the platform which by their thinking and acting they have erected for us.

All the new discoveries that are being so numerously made in these times are the culmination merely of investigations that have been in progress for thousands of years. We are no brighter than our ancestors. We see for the most part by the inherited results of ancestral intelligence and research.

To think lightly of what has been done and to ignore those who have done it, is to dishonor and disgrace ourselves by our attitude of contempt for those from whom we have received so many and such magnificent bequests.

Principle for Which We Are Contending Applies to All Kinds of Results

People who fly off on sudden tangents from the lines of belief that have been loyally and affectionately pursued for years and centuries are guilty of the same childish flippancy as any little boy who scorns the counsel of his father and wilfully builds up his experience out of his own puerile experimentings.

When a father said to his boy, "My son, I wouldn't do that. I have learned by experience that it is an unwise thing to do." To this the boy replied: "But, father, I want to learn it by experience, too."

The race would be a great way further forward than it is if it had been willing to walk by the guidance of the lessons ancestrally learned.

The principle for which we are contending applies to all kinds of results wrought out by previous thinking, whether along lines of science, religion or politics.

A religion such as that which was laid at the foundation of American life and institutions may be in all respects the perfect thing.

But it has served us well. Its principles have been a light illuminating not alone our own national pathway, but the pathway of all the peoples that stand in the front rank of current civilization, and he is not only false to the past, but sails out wildly upon an unchartered sea who bluntly breaks his connection with those views of life, character and action by which for centuries the favored nations of the earth have been guided.

A candid mind will always be willing to replace a present opinion by a different one that has been carefully proved to be better. But the brusque abandonment of anybody or anything that has been tried and found faithful and helpful betrays a mind that is slovenly in its thinking and childishly and stupidly wilful in its planning and purposing. Likewise in matters of political faith.

Innovations Proposed by Progressives May Be Sound

An article by Henry Cabot Lodge in the July issue of a magazine is worth reading in this connection. Perhaps the innovations proposed by the progressives may be sound and expedient.

It may be that the policy of the initiative, referendum and recall may be a wise one for us to adopt nationally, but the innovation is a broad one, and there is a great deal involved in it, more than one man out of a hundred has as yet carefully estimated probably, and it is not to be adopted till there is a studiously attained conviction and a pretty unanimous conviction that a change will prove to the betterment of our condition; not until there has been secured a well-considered appreciation of the success that has been achieved by traveling the century-old road of representative government; not until there has been a careful weighing of the statesmanly character of the men by whom the constitution was produced; not until the public mind has been made familiar with the processes of argument and debate which led up to the framing of the constitution in its existing form, and not until it has been distinctly and satisfactorily indicated that present national conditions so far differ from what they were in 1787 as to render a remodeling of the constitution necessary or expedient.

GOVERNOR ARAM J. POTHIER of Rhode Island will be the editor of next Sunday's AMERICAN, the fourth New England Governor to assume charge of the Sunday edition of this newspaper.

These "Governors' Editions" of the Sunday AMERICAN have proved one of the most notable achievements in the history of New England journalism. Edited successively by Governor Plaisted of Maine, Governor Bass of New Hampshire and Governor Foss of Massachusetts, they have aroused a nation-wide interest. There was never anything like them before.

The fifth and last of the "Governors' Editions" will be the Sunday AMERICAN of August 11. Governor John A. Mead of Vermont will be the editor.
